Why Pay Interest? Why? T. R.? What T. R.? They Ate Swans Two Dead. One Woman

It is alleged that President Roosevelt will veto the Patman bill, which would pay veterans their bonus in new money, freeing the country and taxpayers from a load of $66,000,000 a year interest on bonds.

Just how the pawnbroker crowd undertake to prove that interest-bearing bonds with no gold back of them are more valuable than government money bearing no interest is not clear, but some things ARE clear, including these:

Two billion, two hundred million dollars given to the veterans in new money would be spent promptly, in every corner of the United States. And, as the learned Will Rogers remarks, all that money, thanks to government taxation ingenuity, would soon be back in the United States' treasury.

To issue two thousand, two hundred millions in bonds would mean locking up that much money, putting away bonds to draw interest in safe deposit boxes, inviting Americans to withdraw their money from enterprises that create payrolls and put it into dead, idle bond issues.

What pawnbroker, in or out of the administration, can prove that it is better to pay the veterans with bonds and charge taxpayers an amount equal to the bonus, instead of paying new money and saving twenty-two hundred million dollars' interest?

Former Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania praises "T. R." in discussing forest conservation.

Older Americans have difficulty in realizing that for millions of their fellow citizens "T. R." means nothing. Even if spelled out, "Theodore Roosevelt," some would not know, especially the millions born since 1914.

On the other hand, everybody knows the meaning of "Franklin D." Sic transit gloria mundi.

In 1363, nearly six hundred years ago, the Vintners, wine merchants of England, entertained five kings at dinner, Edward Third of England, David of Scotland, John of France, Waldemar Third of Denmark, Amadeus Sixth of Cyprus. Habits change slowly in England. The Vintners have just given the same kind of dinner to the four sons of King George: Wales, York, Gloucester and Kent.

King George was toasted as "His Majesty the King, Seigneur of the Swans," a very old title. The King still owns all the swans that swim on the Thames, and his royal keeper of the swans is important.

The swan in England is a royal bird, and to prove it the Vintners had roast swan for dinner to the young princes. The Prince of Wales, responding, quoted an old song:

"Come, let us drink the Vintners' good health,
But the cask, not the coffer, that holds the true wealth."

Sometimes Britons really enjoy themselves and forget depression, Bolshevism, Mussolini, Hitler and other worries.

Can any learned reader tell this writer, who tries to raise swans, how snapping turtles can be kept from dragging under and devouring the newly-hatched cygnets? Every year the little swans come out and the snapping turtles get them.

A young woman, about 25 years old, "slim, attractive with blonde hair," and her escort, "a petty gangster," who didn't amount to much, were picked up in Queens, Long Island, both killed by bullets, five in him, one through the woman's head. All this is part of news routine.

The man killed had been arrested when another gangster was killed, and the machine gun then used by him was the identical gun seized by police after another gang murder. How do you suppose that machine gun got back "into circulation?"

Could it be that some officials sell machine guns to gangsters in addition to selling immunity?

Winthrop W. Aldrich, head of our biggest bank, says the committee banking bill contains possibilities of "a vicious and perhaps uncontrollable conflagration of inflation" and would make of the Federal Reserve system "an instrument of despotic authority."

Mr. Aldrich is a son of the late Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island, one of the ablest men in the Senate's history. It would be worth while listening to his advice but for the fact that, in these days, real success in business or in industry is supposed to mean that you don't know anything about either. Some "brain-trusters" would assure you that Ford, Sloan and Chrysler knew nothing about the automobile industry.

In Georgia, voting for repeal of prohibition, with separate votes for beer and wine, church

WOMAN DYING IN BEACON HILL FALL

Plunging from a third-story window of a lodging house in Pinckney street, a woman about 45 years old was critically injured today.

The woman, screaming as she plunged, landed in an alley in the rear of the building, while neighbors, aroused by her screams, rushed from their homes.

At first believed dead, the woman was found to be breathing when picked up.

She was rushed to Massachusetts General Hospital, unconscious.

From the landlady, Mrs. Alice W. Randles, police obtained the information that the lodger's name was either Kingsley or Kingsbury and that the landlady believed her first name to be Ruth.

The plunge victim has a daughter working somewhere in Boston, according to Mrs. Randles.

AgawamRaces Face Fight

By Associated Press.

Agawam, May 17—Opponents of horseracing plan to continue their fight at the special town meeting tonight, Chairman J. D. Pond of the Agawam Civic League said today.

They were disappointed at the report last night of the town's zoning commission. The commission unanimously favored a zone change that would permit use of Bowles-Agawam airport for horse racing.

The civil league and other opponents of racing had looked for a split decision and a minority report.

J. Gilman Clark, chairman of the commission, said its decision was based on unsoundness of the airport as an investment for the town, exaggeration of the moral menace, and the advantage of accruing taxes.

FOUR PERISH IN CONVENT BLAZE

By Associated Press

Joliette, Que., May 17—Three firemen lost their lives today as they fought flames that destroyed the convent of the sisters of the Congregation of Notre Dame here.

An aged nun, Sister Ste. Elaine Desseure, 75, died of heart disease shortly after the fire broke out in the kitchen of the convent.

All other [illegible] escaped. Fifty [illegible] and 50 nuns escaped. Firemen led them to safety.

THE DEAD

Sister St. Elaine, 18.
Fireman Louis Chartier, 22.
Fireman Gulbert Fleury, 29.
Oscar Furlong, 23, volunteer fireman.

Fireman Jean Lecuyer, 42, was seriously injured. He was taken to a hospital in a critical condition.

The convent and normal school, built in 1875, still blazed fiercely as noon approached. Joliette and Montreal firemen played water on the flames.

Breaking out in the kitchen of the institution, the fire spread rapidly through the building, and the four upper stories quickly caught fire.

Nuns started to lead the children and pensioners to safety. A host of volunteers joined firemen in the rescue work and all occupants were carried from the building. Almost every man in this town of 11,000 turned out to help fight the fire.

The shock proved too much for Sister Ste. Elaine, who was about to celebrate the golden jubilee of her entry into the sisterhood. She collapsed and died while the fire was at its height.

Bonus Bill at White House

Washington, May 17—The Patman inflationary bonus bill was sent to the White House today for certain veto.

The last congressional formality was completed when Vice-President Garner signed the $2,200,000,000 measure.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt set aside this afternoon to start writing the veto message which probably will be sent to Congress on Monday.

It will go to the House first, where leaders concede it will be quickly overridden.

The real test will come in the Senate, probably about the middle of the week, administration leaders maintained they had the votes to sustain the veto.

$1000 Dental Work Trap Laid for Killer of 3

CANVAS CLUE IN MYSTERY

By ARTHUR J. QUINN

Middlebury, Vt., May 17—One of the three victims in the skeleton murder mystery was a woman of wealth.

This was announced today by State Attorney John T. Conley after a conference with Assistant State Pathologist Fred S. Kent.

Careful examination of the teeth, according to Conley, showed that $1500 worth of dental work had been done shortly before death, and that its work was unfinished.

"The findings are considered important in solving the murder mystery which may assume national importance."

TO TRACE BY CHART

"The dental work was certainly by a skilled worker, but it was of such an expensive nature that he would never have done it without being paid as he went along," said Conley.

"The teeth were being straightened by a costly process and there was expensive bridgework."

"There is no question but what the dentist will recognize his work if one of our charts reaches him."

If no response is received when the dental charts are sent throughout the northeastern states they will be sent throughout the entire country. These will be ready for mailing tomorrow.

It has been determined that the girl victim was about 15. She and the man also had undergone considerable dental treatment.

Discovery of pieces of striped canvas at the spot where the skeleton were found gave the authori-

'Doc' Barker Jailed for Life

By Associated Press

St. Paul, May 17—Arthur "Doc" Barker, convicted of conspiracy in the $200,000 kidnaping of Edward G. Bremer, St. Paul banker, today was sentenced to life imprisonment by Federal Judge M. M. Joyce who imposed a similar sentence upon Oliver A. Berg, Illinois convict co-defendant.

The charge under the Lindbergh law, was conspiracy to kidnap.

Convicted with the gangster who with Alvin Karpis headed the Barker-Karpis mob were:

Harold Alderton, in whose home at Bensenville, Ill., Bremer was held prisoner 21 days; Oliver Berg, lifer in the Illinois State prison, John J. McLaughlin, 68-year-old former political leader in Chicago, and James J. Wilson, 27-year-old former Northwestern University medical student.

Freed were William Vidler, Chicago "hookie" and Phillip Delaney, former restaurant and tavern proprietor in Chicago.

Nazis Jail Nun 5 Years

Berlin, May 17—A Nazi court today sentenced Sister Werners, secretary of the Vincente Order of Catholic nuns at Cologne, to five years in prison for violation of Germany's rigid foreign exchange restrictions.

Judge Herman Jordan, presiding, also fined the nun 140,000 marks and decreed that she lose citizenship rights during the next five years.

If she cannot pay the fine, she must spend an additional 14 months in prison.

To reimburse the Reich for the 252,000 marks she admitted smuggling out of the country, an equal amount will be collected from the Vincentian order.

The court decided not to try simultaneously all the nuns and friars similarly accused "for reasons of expediency," as the presiding judge observed, but to handle their cases singly.

More than 50 nuns are held.

SUDDEN PLEA BY DILL HEAD IN $750,000 SWINDLE

Harold L. McCormack, bucketeering broker, is behind the bars of State Prison.

He was sentenced there today—to serve from five to ten years.

Fugitive since mid-March following a $750,000 stock swindle—nabbed in Buffalo, N. Y., only last Tuesday — McCormack walked into Suffolk superior court today to surprise the public, shock his friends and please the state by pleading guilty to three indictments against him.

"Are you guilty or not guilty of operating a bucket shop, Dill & Co., Inc., of which you were president?"

"Guilty."

"Are you guilty or not guilty of the fraudulent conversion of, or larceny of securities valued at $414,383.33, property of Investors Trading Corporation, the Dill affiliate?"

"Guilty."

"Are you guilty or not guilty of the larceny of $23,013.87 from Dill & Co., Inc.?"

"Guilty."

Chin up, the big, youthful appearing bucketeer snapped out his admissions of guilt of each charge the state made against him.

ONLY $2000 ASSETS

His shirt was dark blue, newly pressed. His tie was light blue. His pink cheeks were close-shaven.

Attorney-General Paul A. Dever, now engaged in an investigation of the state utilities department for its failure to curb McCormack's operations, told Judge John M. Gibbs that the only assets of his companies were the furniture in their offices—valued at about $2000.

Some $800 persons—among them clergymen, doctors, teachers — known to have invested through McCormack face the loss of every penny of their investments, Dever declared.

The sentence imposed by the court was upon his recommendation.

PRESIDENT HOLDS UP O. K. ON BILLION-DOLLAR WORKS

HIS WORD TO MAKE THINGS HUM; WAGES NOT FIXED

By Associated Press

Washington, May 17—A quick O. K. from the White House on the $1,091,802,200 worth of work relief projects recommended to President Roosevelt by chiefs of the relief drive was considered virtually certain in high quarters today.

Since the President himself attended the session of the advisory allotment board which culminated late yesterday when the board recommended the projects, the action of the President in withholding an immediate approval caused some surprise.

The reason was not announced. It was recalled, however, that in the congressional fight over the $4,880,000,000 work-relief bill—when critics were hammering at Secretary Ickes—the word went down the line from the White House that the President would have the final say in allotting money.

Ickes and Harry L. Hopkins have two of the kingpin positions in the work-relief setup. Though the 20-man allotment board gave its formal approval yesterday, observers saw indications that it followed a chart largely pre-arranged.

One official said its action was mostly routine, because other agencies had studied the proposals and submitted data.

WISCONSIN GETS ITS ALL

Whether this meant the allotments board had been permanently reduced to a routine part in the works machinery was not announced. In two hours it approved the projects covering a wide range of types in hundreds of localities.

Immediately afterward Frank C. Walker, applications chief, read the outline of projects.

The two items that apparently had not been included in the previously prepared sheet were $100,000,000 for 140 projects in Wisconsin and $7,550,000 for building a Ward Island sewage treatment plant in New York city.

Wisconsin thus obtained in a single allotment a sum designed, officials said, to take care of all its relief problems. It was granted with the proviso that the state furnish the remainder of the $206,000,000 cost of the projects, arrange to repay the federal government $30,000,000 and pass enabling legislation.

Mayor LaGuardia of New York, who is on the allotment board as representative of the conference of mayors, attended the meeting and was smiling broadly as he left. When a reporter asked if New York got any money, he replied:

"You bet we did."

Although the projects are considered virtually certain to obtain final approval, some decisions remain before the work relief drive is aimed to provide jobs for 3,500,000—can swing into action.

Hopkins, head of the progress division, must announce wage and hours schedules.

His figures on unemployment totals for various areas, on which officials have said the distribution of funds will be based, has not been announced.

First of the announcements made by Walker was $500,000,000 for road and rail crossing projects. Walker said $100,000,000 of this was from an old highway fund; with $200,000,000 for highways, roads and streets and an identical sum for grade crossing eliminations coming from the new fund.

Every state received at least $2,000,000 from this half billion with New York and Texas getting nearly $30,000,000 each.

Few details were made public on the $249,860,000 allotted to 67 slum clearance and low-rent housing projects.

Information on the 47 waterways projects, which army engineers will direct, was more complete. These total $112,186,500 and include navigation, dredging and repairs on principal rivers, canals and harbors.

Army engineers also will have $10,000,000 to harness tidal power along the Maine seacoast in a start on the long debated Passamaquoddy Bay project.

Curley Sees More Cash From U. S.

Governor Curley is satisfied that Massachusetts, which gets $19,844,955 out of the first allotment of Federal work-relief funds, will receive many times that amount eventually.

"The figures are not final," he said.

"I am going to fight at Washington for all I can get.

"Thus far only $1,091,000,000 has been allotted, out of four billion dollars.

"Included in the allotment to Massachusetts is not the $2,000,000 for the national guard camp on Cape Cod which we have been promised.

"The government has awarded use in this first allotment $4,310,000 for grade crossing elimination. If we can induce the government to make a grant of $25,000,000, I will not hesitate to ask the legislature for a $10,000,000 bond issue for land takings.

"We are starting this afternoon on the grade crossing projects. There will be no delay.

AT TOP OF LIST

"Those cities and towns which have already taken care of the land taking angle will come first. There is Quincy and Salem and Worcester at the top of the list."

The Federal award to Massachusetts includes:

For highways, roads and streets: $3,262,855, of the $200,000,000 appropriated.

For elimination of grade crossings: $4,710,533, of a total $100,000,000.

For the War Department's rivers and harbors projects: $3,696,000, of a total $112,186,500.

The huge housing project announced for the country, totaling $249,860,000, will bring $5,000,000 here, as was announced when the South Boston slum clearance program was inaugurated.

MAINE'S BIG SHARE

Maine fared well with approval of the long-awaited appropriation for the Passamaquoddy Bay tidal power project.

The sum of $10,000,000 was set aside for this. An influx of more than 15,000 workmen into Eastport, center of the project, is anticipated.

Hailed in Massachusetts however was the appropriation of five millions dollars for work on the Cape Cod Canal and $475,000 for dredging the Mystic river.

Boston and Sagamore will share most of the Cape funds.

The $5,000,000 allotment to the housing project in South Boston gave final stamp of approval to plans which call for work to be begun this summer.

The harbors of Fairhaven and New Bedford, however, are included in the army engineers' dredging program and $221,000 is to be spent on these contracts.

The Bonus 'Bogey'

A SENATE which is about to swallow, hook, line and sinker, the administration's banking and currency bill, will fool nobody by voting against passing the Patman bonus bill over the President's veto, on the grounds that it is inflationary.

Title 11 of the banking bill, setting up a politically controlled Central Bank in Washington, is so drawn as to make possible an unlimited inflation of the currency.

Beside this banking bill the method of payment provided by the Patman bill, through the issuance of Treasury notes, is conservative.

The essential conservatism of this method of payment has been emphasized by three distinguished administration financial authorities.

It has been emphasized by Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. His words, spoken perhaps inadvertently at Pinehurst, have carried conviction to the people.

THE conservatism of the Patman bill has been conceded by William G. McAdoo, secretary of the Treasury during the World War.

Marriner S. Eccles, banker, and appointed by President Roosevelt to be governor of the Federal Reserve Board, declared before a Senate committee that the method of payment of the bonus, through the issuance of Treasury notes, would not necessarily increase the amount of money outstanding, as other currency might be contracted while the bonus money was being used.

Senators who claim that they are opposed to the Patman bill because of its inflationary character have had their argumentative props knocked from under them without warning. When a conservative like Jesse H. Jones can declare that the payment of the bonus by this method would not do injury to the nation's finances, who can be frightened by the hobgoblin of inflation?

When an authority like William G. McAdoo asserts that this payment would not affect the nation's credit, how futile the cry of inflation sounds!

SENATORS will find that they cannot defend that argument. It simply will not hold water.

And if Senators shift their position to the one that they must stand by the President, right or wrong, will they not find that even more untenable? They most assuredly will!

The payment of the adjusted compensation to the veterans of the World War has been too long deferred.

The forthcoming veto—in the event that Mr. Roosevelt finally does submit a veto message to the Congress—should be ignored in the manner prescribed by the Constitution. The whole country demands it.

Well may the nation ask of the United States Senate today, as it confronts its duty to the boy heroes of 1917:

"What man is there of you, whom if his son ask bread, will he give him a stone?"

PAY THE BONUS NOW!

To Senator .....
Washington, D. C.

I believe that the World War veterans should be paid their promised bonus NOW.

I believe that the Patman veterans' bonus bill provides the best method of discharging this patriotic obligation.

Both Houses of Congress have passed this bill and its defeat by Executive veto would be most unjust to the defenders of the republic.

I, therefore, appeal to you as my representative in Congress to cast your vote in favor of sustaining the Patman bill and against its veto.

WAGNER BILL VOTE WAITS ON ROOSEVELT

By Associated Press

Washington, May 17—House leaders agreed to obtain a definite expression of President Roosevelt's opinion of the Wagner labor disputes bill before starting to maneuver it to the floor for a vote.

Supporters of the measure, passed 63 to 12 yesterday by the Senate without an amendment, say the President wants it enacted. Mr. Roosevelt, however, has not openly indorsed the bill, and it is not on his "must" legislative program.

The House labor committee was ready to give its backing to provide legislative right of way. It already has approved a companion bill by Chairman Connery.

TALK AT WHITE HOUSE

But Chairman O'Connor of the rules committee said he would go to the White House and discuss the bill with the President before going ahead with it.

The bill aims, its backers say, at establishing permanent legal sanction for collective bargaining by labor through representatives of its own choosing. It differs from the industrial recovery act in that the latter, in Section 7A, offers collective bargaining only to employes in codified industries.

In addition, the measure would set up a permanent national labor relations board which would become a quasi-judicial "supreme court of labor." It aims to outlaw "company-dominated" unions.

IN LABOR DEPARTMENT

The House labor committee is expected to write into the bill a proviso that the board should be placed in the Department of Labor instead of being made an independent agency.

Secretary Perkins and the American Federation of Labor approve that course, but Senator Wagner (D.-N.Y.), author of the Senate bill, believes it should not be put under any other government body.

The measure has been fought by many industrialists and other employers.

U. S. JOB LIST STILL GROWS

By International News Service

Newark, N. J., May 17—United States Senator W. Warren Barbour today told the Essex County Republican Women's Club 20 per cent of the nation's workers will soon be on the federal payrolls.

"A year ago," the Senator said, "the Civil Service Commission estimated the number of federal office holders as 120,000 more than when Mr. Roosevelt took office.

"This number has increased in the past year. But the increase will be greater still in another year. A survey shows that under the new deal laws since 1932 more than 3000 branch offices of federal bureaus have been established in the 48 states.

"The percentage of workers in the country on the federal payroll mounted from 5 per cent in 1916 to 3 per cent in 1932 to 16 per cent in 1934. At the present rate of growth the percentage will be fully 20 per cent."

3 Byrd Dogs Flee, 2 Caught

Three Eskimo dogs, belonging to members of Admiral Byrd's expedition, broke away from their chains aboard the Jacob Ruppert today at the Navy Yard while their masters were ashore.

One returned to the ship. Another was found in a shed in Yard 13 of the Boston & Maine Railroad and taken by police back to the Navy Yard.

The third is still missing.

BOY'S BODY Found in Creek

Annapolis, Md., May 17 (AP)—The body of Frank A. Sazama, 7, son of a Naval Academy athletic instructor, missing nearly two days, was found today in Weems Creek, about 100 yards from his home.

Two boys in a rowboat found the body under the West Annapolis bridge. It appeared the boy had fallen from the bridge on his way home from school Wednesday.

bells were tolled to remind prohibitionists to vote against both agents of "the demon rum." Nevertheless, beer and wine seemed to be winning when this was written.

Apparently Americans must learn to deal with the demon rum each one for himself, as children learn to walk.

Washington reports "the Treasury's deficit today passed three billions," which is three times the amount of the national debt as it stood in 1914. Three billions means nothing today, when five billions can be handed out as "stop-gap" money.

Perhaps we are spending money too rapidly. Perhaps, on the other hand, we are just discovering how rich we really are, and should wonder why we didn't begin spending long ago.

The poor Wall Street broker whose untutored mind thought "big share days" had forever gone "whistling down the wind" cheered up yesterday. Stocks went up, 2,000,000 shares were sold, the best day in nearly a year.

There is talk of inflation, although Secretary Morgenthau says there isn't going to be any, and many Americans begin to think that just as the "price of wisdom is above rubies," so the value of sound stocks may soon be far above the value of the uncertain American dollar.

Jobs! Jobs!

By International News Service

Washington, May 17—One million unemployed off the relief rolls and at work on relief projects by June 30.

One million, five hundred thousand more at work by July 31.

This was the ambitious program the administration launched today, after three and one-half months of congressional and organization delays on the $4,000,000,000 work and relief act.

The first allocations of funds awaited the signature of President Roosevelt.

STATE RELIEF BILL KILLED

The State House of Representatives today rejected a bill without debate which would provide a $5,000,000 public works program for persons not eligible for Federal relief.

The bill was intended for small home owners who cannot seek Federal assistance on account of having an equity in property, its sponsors said.

TWILIGHT SLEEP, INSANITY CURE

Power of Words Told

By Associated Press

Washington, May 17—Twilight sleep for men as well as women, curing mild insanity of both sexes, was reported to the American Psychiatric Association today.

Several successful cases were described, including one that might be called "stock market-itis," a man caught in the 1929 crash, who not only broke mentally but was in physical pain.

This form of sleep, which he called "twilight narcosis," was described by A. L. Skoog, M. D., of Kansas City. He gives the patients a form of sodium amytal, which puts them into a condition resembling drugged sleepiness.

They can speak occasionally, but are mostly too drowsy even for that. This condition lasts for hours, during which the physician talks to them. His words are the only treatment.

The business man who cracked up after 1929 was worried, slept poorly, was unable to work, had pain in the back and other places, shriveling of some parts of his body and spells of fear.

Examination showed no disease. He was put to sleep twice, 12 days apart. Both times his physician talked, telling him he could hope for full recovery, that he had no internal disorders, that he was not shriveled and that his brain was normal.

A few weeks of rest followed and the man recovered. He became healthy and returned to business.

Dr. Skoog said the twilight condition appears to weaken the will and to clear out the stubbornness in the brain. The gray matter functions temporarily on some different level, one not well understood.

While in that condition the brain accepts impressions given in spoken words and afterward translates them into control of mind over matter.

The physician said that not all kinds of mental ills may be treated in this manner.

Nightmare? Try Sweet Sniff or a Sweet Tune

Washington, May 17 — A treatment for nightmares, in which they are spoofed to death with a combination of perfume, willpower, and music, today was described to the American Psychiatric Association.

Not only bad dreams, but "depression insomnias" are effectively banished, said Valentine Ujhely, assistant in neurology at Columbia University, who exhibited the treatment.

It was devised primarily for even more serious mental states, such as anxiety, moderate stupors and confusion.

Nightmare victims lie down on a couch and relax. Their faces are covered with four layers of gauze, muffling nose, mouth, eyes and ears.

Jasmine and tuberose perfumes are dropped on the gauze at the rate of about two or three drops a minute. Symphony music plays and the person on the couch becomes somnolent.

He lies in this state, day-dreaming, for half or three-quarters of an hour.

These day dreams are carefully selected in advance. They usually retrace the ideas of the patient's youth, the pleasant things in his life.

From time to time a soft gong sounds, a signal to change the dream. One of the changes is the conscious introduction of the nightmare.

The patient forces his imagination to go through the nightmare. But not as in sleep. Instead he sort of dares it to do its worst. He says to himself—this thing is only a dream. He imagines his physician stepping up to him and pointing out how unreal the dream is.

After the treatment he sits up and reconstructs the events which he day-dreamed. Dr. Ujhely said:

"This method has proven so satisfactory that patients who have habitually resorted to narcotics could discard them."

"YOUR HAT, SIR!"

'Butler Drank My Rum'

"This way, if you please, sir!" Just the technique of bowing a gentleman in, as demonstrated by William Graham, former "Jeeves" in the fashionable Flick household in Fifth avenue, New York. He's plaintiff in a slander suit.

MISS MARGOT FLICK

"Your hat, sir!" In this manner a gentleman's gentleman performs his office, speeding a departing guest. Butler William Graham, suing his former employer, Miss Margot Flick, for slander, tells how he, himself, was "given his hat"!

FLICK ACCUSES SERVANT OF "HANGOVER," TELLS OF QUART

New York, May 17—R. Jay Flick, master of the household involved in a butler's $100,000 slander suit, testified today that the bedroom incident upon which the suit is based was but the mere climax to circumstances that justified the self-described impeccable butler's discharge.

"He was drinking my liquor right along," Flick said indignantly, speaking of William Lawrence Graham, his former gentleman's gentleman, the plaintiff in the case.

Flick, a white-haired, stocky man of middle age and aristocratic bearing, with white mustache waxed to upward points, is the husband of Mrs. Henrietta Flick and the stepfather of her daughter, Margot, the two defendants.

Graham was discharged from the Flick service on November 7, 1931, after Miss Margot Flick had accused him of entering her bedroom in the Flicks' New York apartment without knocking while she was in sleeping pajamas on the morning of November 6.

The butler alleged the accusation amounted to slander and that it caused him to lose his bride, drove him to drink (which he said he never did before) and ruined his professional reputation.

Flick was at the New York apartment until just before the bedroom incident. He testified that Graham served him breakfast. Flick said:

"He looked groggy, his face was bloated. He looked like he had a hangover."

The butler had testified in his own behalf that he overheard Miss Flick telephoning the alleged slander to her mother who was at the Flick home in Lenox, Mass., while he was packing his master's bag in his master's bedroom. Flick asserted:

"I never carry a bag to New York."

Flick related what Mrs. Flick told him about the incident when he reached Lenox. He said:

"I immediately said 'This man must go.'"

Flick testified that on one occasion he had Graham serve one highball for himself and another for a guest, and upon returning found a new quart of Scotch whisky finished.

"Did you see Graham drink the Scotch?" asked Bernard Sandler, attorney for Graham.

"No but I don't know who else could have taken my liquor," replied Flick.

Q—"Outside of that you found Graham honest?" A—"Outside of taking my liquor I don't know what else he took."

Q—"You don't really consider that a flagrant offense?" A—"Least not plenty."

Sandler asked Flick if he thought Graham had dishonorable intentions when he entered his stepdaughter's bedroom.

"I don't think he had dishonorable intentions. I think he was drunk."

Mrs. Flick, an auburn-haired, stately woman afflicted with rheumatism, followed her husband and testified from a wheel chair placed near the counsel table.

She, too, declared that the butler was given to surreptitious sips. She said she smelled liquor on his breath almost every afternoon.

Her version of the telephone conversation with Margot, which the butler alleged was slanderous, was as follows:

"Margot said, 'mother, I don't know what's the matter with Graham. He says he is sick, but he looks like he has been drinking whiskey. He burst open the door into my room and said, 'I'm a very ill man. I'm a very ill man.'"

She testified that in discharging Graham's bride as her parlor maid, she told her only that Graham had burst into Miss Margot's room and that he was intoxicated.

ANN'S Surprise MOVE

BATTLE AGAIN OVER CHILD

By Associated Press

Los Angeles, May 17—It was blonde Ann Harding's move today in the legal chess game she had been playing with Harry Bannister, her former husband, over the custody of their six-year-old daughter, Jane.

The actress hinted at a surprise move as she planned to appear before Michael G. Ludy, Bannister's attorney, to give her deposition in the case.

"On the advice of my attorney I must necessarily remain silent at this time," she said.

"For that reason I am not at liberty to say just what is planned when I appear at the deposition."

At the time of the couple's divorce about two years ago in Reno Miss Harding was awarded custody of the child for the major portion of each year.

Last fall Miss Harding returned to Reno and won sole custody of Jane.

Bannister countered with a suit filed here, charging the actress was not the proper person to care for their daughter, and challenging jurisdiction of the Nevada court in giving her exclusive control of Jane.

Miss Harding denied his allegations, and today's deposition was subsequently ordered.

Morgan Faces Million Loss In Miniatures Auction

By Associated Press

New York, May 17—J. P. Morgan may have to take a paper loss as high as $1,000,000 when his father's extensive collection of miniatures is sold at auction next month.

The sale, in the famous rooms of Christie, Manson & Woods in London, will be held in four sessions, June 24 to 28, it became known yesterday.

London was chosen for the sale because European collectors have shown more interest in the miniatures than American connoisseurs.

Art dealers say the late J. Pierpont Morgan spent around $2,000,000 assembling his magnificent collection.

He was willing to pay almost any price if he wanted a miniature.

It is estimated the collection should bring in the neighborhood of $1,000,000 at Christie's.

There are 765 items in the catalogue prepared by Christie's, including the famous "armada jewel," made at the command of Queen Elizabeth to commemorate the defeat of the Spanish fleet.

No authority is willing to venture an estimate as to what this piece will bring.

Another famous miniature, however, Heilbeln's Mrs. Pemberton, is expected to go for not less than $25,000.

STRIP BANDITS ELUDE POLICE IN CHASE

Four men in a Florida car, believed to be the downtown strip-bandits, escaped police in Andrew square, South Boston, today, after a three-mile chase through Dorchester.

To the manager of a chain store in Norfolk avenue, Dorchester, they had tried to sell a man's watch, believed to be part of the loot of four downtown holdups yesterday, in which the victims were made to remove their clothing to balk pursuit.

The manager refused to buy, and when the men left the store he telephoned police, noting the Florida registration.

A radio patrol car picked up the other automobile a short distance from the scene and a high-speed chase to Andrew square resulted.

Radio cars were directed to search through South Boston for the machine that escaped.

GIRLS IN BANDIT HUNT

Twelve headquarters detectives were assigned to round up the audacious, well-dressed gunmen, working in pairs, who forced their victims to disrobe.

Victims were invited to attempt identification of two drunken men arrested in the Back Bay, but no results along this line were expected; it was a mere formality. The pair were later released.

Police broke precedent when they took several of the victims of the robberies on a night club tour in search of the bandits.

Of the 10 who suffered indignities on orders of the gunmen, Miss Sylvia Beals and her sister, Iris, of 38 Ivy street, probably had the strangest experience.

They were working in the Whitcomb Travel Bureau office, 430 Stuart street, the third place into which the bandits pounced, and were preparing locloss shop for the day.

Emmons J. Whitcomb, the owner, was talking to Mrs. William Copithorne, of 35 Sunset road, West Somerville, a prospective customer.

COVERED WITH GUNS

The two bandits walked briskly into the place, whisked out guns, and ordered all four into the rear room.

Covered, they complied.

There, Miss Elizabeth Wheeler, of Westminster road, East Weymouth, a clerk, was working. They added her to the list of victims.

"Strip," said one of the bandits tersely.

Whitcomb and three of the young women complied without discussion after one look at the menacing guns. Mrs. Copithorne hesitated, and one of the bandits repeated his order.

But the other said:

"The shoes will be enough. Are you blind?"

SAVES RING

Iris Beale thought fast. As she was removing her dress, she slipped her engagement ring into the folds, and kept it hidden.

But her sister had kept her ring on. The bandits took it. She started to cry, and begged to have it back. The bandit who had rescinded the strip order for Mrs. Copithorne walked over to her.

"Here it is, sister," he said.

He slipped it on her finger. Then he added:

"You're a nice kid. I'd like to take you out some time. O. K., cutie?"

POLICE MOBILIZE

While that robbery was going on, police were being mobilized to cover the strategic points of the downtown section after the previous two robberies.

Those were at the Eastern Steamship offices in the Little building, at Tremont and Boylston streets, and the Florshein shoe store at 50 School street, opposite City Hall.

In those two first hold-ups, in which exactly the same strip-the-victim tactics were employed, they garnered $850 and considerable loot in rings and watches.

Their fourth holdup was at a substation of the Postal Telegraph Company at 116 Stuart street. There they got less than $35.

MANIAC HUNT IN TRIPLE MURDER

ties a clue which may lead to the scene of the killings.

CANVAS IS CLUE

The murders were committed, the authorities say, at some house, perhaps only a few miles from the grave, perhaps a considerable distance away.

The striped canvas is believed to be from an awning or porch hammock. Previously the canvas covering which had been wrapped around the bodies was believed to have been from an army duffle bag.

There are various indications that the victims were killed in their beds. These include pillow feathers found under the skull of the man.

The authorities are inclined to a theory that the killer was a madman.

The skull of the man appears to have been fractured from a terrific blow and the lower jaw of the girl was broken.

The victims were all shot through the forehead and the authorities have not veered from their belief that they were mother, father and daughter.

BULLET TO G MEN

A copper-jacketed bullet, found in the skull of the man, has been sent to the Department of Justice in Washington for examination.

Authorities feel certain the time of the murder was in the fall of 1932, probably late November.

Dress Hides Her Ring in Holdup

Slipping her engagement ring into the folds of her dress when ordered to strip, Miss Iris Beals of Ivy street, Back Bay, outwitted two bandits in a holdup of the Whitcomb Travel Agency, Stuart street.

Human Torch Dives in Sea

Gloucester, May 17—His hair and clothing ablaze, Joseph Auditore, 38, captain of the 42-foot fishing boat Paisana, saved his life today by diving overboard. He was seriously burned.

He was saved from the sea by his crew, Samuel Ciaramitaro and Elliott Lane, who threw him a line.

Auditore was working over the engine, two hours out of here, en route for fishing off Newport, R. I., when it backfired. He shut off the motor before he dived.

4 DEER ISLAND MEN MISSING, CAN'T BE FIRED

Four of the Deer Island guards facing discharge have been missing and cannot be found to be fired.

One has been gone two months, and neither he nor any of the other three can be ousted under the law, until notified that ouster proceedings have been filed against them.

Major George F. A. Mulcahy, House of Correction master, said that his hands are tied against these four until they can be served with notices.

The ouster proceedings against these four and four others were begun following a visit to the island by a city council committee headed by Councilor Richard D. Gleason of Roxbury.

Today Gleason said he is skeptical that liquor alone was responsible for "scandalous" conditions at the island.

NOT DRUNK, SAYS DOHERTY

City Councillor John J. Doherty of Ward 10, Roxbury Crossing, said today that the guard discharged is one of his constituents and denies having been drunk.

The city councillor declared that he will introduce an order into the council Monday for an investigation into this case and will ask that Major Mulcahy and Penal Institutions Commissioner John J. Douglass be summoned.

Learning for the first time of the charges against the personnel at Deer Island, Councilor Gleason declared:

"I am going to find out whether it is liquor or dope that is really the cause of all the trouble.

"I also want to find out what else is behind this matter."

Guards at the island jail were to be quizzed by the five councilors, it was learned, as well as officials there.

Although Major Mulcahy and John J. Douglas, penal institutions commissioner, both said that drunkenness alone was responsible for the shakeup and discharges, other reports were still current.

They included allegations that there have been instances of dope smuggling and gambling, gun-running and unlicensed leaves of absence.

Indications were today that the guards under fire might be given an opportunity to resign, thus preserving their civil service ratings.

In the event that they fail to take this opportunity, Mayor Mansfield said, they will be discharged, thus losing their privileges to return to civic employment.

While Master Mulcahy was conferring with Corporation Counsel Henry E. Foley, it was learned that service records of the guards under fire range from four to 14 years.

SAILOR FREED Will Be Deported

Ralph Anderson, sailor on the American ship "Amolco," was freed of an attack charge in federal court today but was remanded to the custody of the immigration officials for deportation to Scotland.

Assistant United States Attorney Charles W. Bartlett, Jr., told the court that it would take weeks to get witnesses to try the attack charge. He told the court immigration authorities wanted him on the deportation warrant for being unlawfully in the country.

Anderson committed an alleged attack on Wayne Parker, another member of the crew.

ABERCROMBIE GIVES SELF UP, FREE ON BAIL

Confident that his marital tangle will be unsnarled soon, George H. Abercrombie, former Melrose manufacturer, now of Ardmore, Pa., surrendered today to Melrose police.

He was arraigned in Middlesex superior court and pleaded not guilty to charges of non-support, desertion and abandonment in 1928, of his first wife, Mrs. Mary S. Abercrombie of Melrose.

He was released in $500 bonds, pending trial on the indictment which will be automatically voided if the first wife is successful in a divorce suit she filed yesterday and if the divorce is heard before the indictment charges are tried.

Abercrombie has made a settlement on Mrs. Abercrombie in lieu of alimony.

"I am very glad that the matter is apparently being settled pleasantly and amicably," he said. "I have none but the kindliest feelings toward Mrs. Abercrombie.

"I have wanted to be fair in this matter from the start. My only desire now is to make the largest settlement that my circumstances will permit. I feel that I will leave her well provided for."

Abercrombie said he left Philadelphia last night and denied he had heard that the Pennsylvania Governor had signed extradition papers.

In 1928, Abercrombie vanished, and so also did Mrs. Grace Lynde, a worker in his lingerie plant.

Several months ago they were found in Ardmore, Pa.

Abercrombie had obtained a Mexican divorce and had married his former employe.

Much Like You or Me!

Surprisingly like any other young honeymooners appear this princess-countess bride, Barbara Hutton Mdivani Haughwitz-Reventlow, and her brand new husband, Count Court von Haughwitz-Reventlow of Denmark. They're off for a San Francisco shopping tour, he in his neat, double-breasted gray business suit and she in a street costume as inconspicuous as it is, no doubt, expensive.

ALL IN FAVOR OF HOME INGREDIENTS SAY: DRAKE'S CAKES

BARBARA MUST PAY FORTUNE TO DENMARK

(Copyright ,1935, by International News Service)

Copenhagen, May 19—The Countess Court von Reventlow-Haugwitz, formerly Princess Alexis Mdivani and before that Barbara Hutton of the five and ten-cent store millions, will be Denmark's most welcome visitor if she chooses to spend part of her honeymoon at her husband's ancestral estate.

For, it was learned today, she may be called upon to contribute out of her colossal fortune twice as much in taxes as all the other residents of the Count's community combined, if she likes Denmark well enough to spend three months out of a year here.

The immensity of Barbara's fortune captured the imagination of Denmark. Whether the national treasury will get any of it was the most topic.

Her fortune is estimated in Danish currency at 225,000,000 kroner, or almost twice the entire gold reserves of the Danish government.

Should she remain three months or more, she will be liable to some 500,000 kroner in taxation.

The entire community of Thoreby, where the Count's residence is located, pays one-half this amount into the national exchequer.

It was generally expected the countess would spend part of her honeymoon at Haugwitz' small estate, Rosenlund, in Thoreby and rented from his brother, Count Heinrich.

There were some reports Count Court might choose to purchase his brother's larger estate nearby—stately Hardenberg castle, ancient family seat of the Haugwitz-Reventlows.

However, it is not where the honeymooners will stay but how long they will remain that is exciting the curiosity of the tax-collectors, for anything less than three months will enable Barbara to avoid the tax.

PRIEST SLAIN, FRIENDS FEAR

Failure of Chinese bandits to demand ransom led to fear today for the life of the Rev. Father Harry M. Bush of Farragut avenue, Medford, who vanished a week ago in Northern Kwantung Province, China.

Father Bush, a graduate of Boston College High School and a brother of Attorney John J. Bush, State street lawyer, disappeared after a visit to friends in the mountains behind the Chak Chin Mission, where he had been stationed since the summer of 1933.

It had been expected ransom demands would be received from the bandits, and the American consul at Swatow, made representations to the local authorities to pay for his release.

There have been scattered showers from the Western Plains States westward to the Pacific Slope, but none of consequence in the eastern half of the country, and clear skies continue over the Northeast. The northern high pressure area, with readings above 30.20 inches in the upper Lake region and interior Canada, influences weather conditions in central and eastern districts, except off the Atlantic coast, where there is a slight depression. The western low pressure trough has moved slightly, and extends from western Texas northwards into northern Rocky Mountain States and Alberta. There has been slight change in temperature distribution, and moderately cool weather continues in northern districts.

RUSSIA TO PAY 5 Billions Debt

Berlin, May 17 (INS)—The German semi-official news agency today circulated an "unconfirmed report" from its Moscow correspondent that Russia had recognised a czarist debt of 75,000,000,000 francs (about $4,950,000,000) to France.

The reported settlement supposedly was in connection with the new France-Soviet mutual assistance pact, which provides for French help in the building of Soviet railroads.

DOCTOR SCOUTS ACCIDENT IN NURSE'S 'ROBIN' DEATH

Attleboro, May 17—Surprise medical testimony today featured an inquest into the "Robin Redbreast" mystery death of pretty Florence Murphy, 19-year-old student nurse.

The girl was found shot to death on her bed at her home on May 5 with a small-calibre shotgun that was to have been used to kill a robin—messenger of doom that came daily to tap at her window, apparently fighting its reflection.

Dr. Percy W. Battershall, medical examiner, testified he believed that any theory of accidental death was "out."

He said he earlier considered it a case not homicidal, but did not give his opinion today.

POSITION OF GIRL'S BODY

He testified he found the position of the gun—resting against the foot of the bed on which the girl lay dead—"inconsistent with the picture," meaning suicide or accident, inasmuch as death probably was instantaneous.

Dr. Carl J. DePrizio, of Mansfield, who first viewed the body, said the girl "might have fallen on the bed, but it also occurred to me, she might have been placed there."

In tears, Mrs. Frederick Murphy testified she believed Florence accidentally killed herself while trying to kill the robin the girl had referred to as "a messenger of death."

MOTHER TELLS OF NOTE

She alone read a letter found by her daughter's body and this, she said, had vanished. It was addressed to Miss Emily Johnson, supervisor of nurses at a Newtonville hospital where the girl had trained, and as far as the mother could recall read:

"Dear John—Got home all right after a pleasant visit. I hope we can have another one soon. As ever, Your Florence."

District Attorney William C. Crossley, conducting the inquest in court here, said the missing letter was "all important."

COULDN'T SEE LETTER

Harold Everett, town manager of Mansfield and head of the police force, was the first witness. He was questioned at length about the letter. He said the mother took the letter and read it, folding it so he could not see how much writing there was.

Q. (By Crossley)—Did she act as if she did not want anyone to see it?

A—Yes.

Everett testimied Miss Murphy's father told him:

"She was playing the radio when I went out to the railroad station and was apparently in fine spirits. About 4:30 I came back and went up to her room.

"Her hands and arms were lying off the edge of the couch. I lifted her arm up and put it across her chest. I thought she was sleeping.

TOOK PHOTO OF BODY

"About 5 o'clock I thought it was funny that she did not come down stairs. She had agreed to do the cooking while my wife was away at a christening.

"I hollered up the stairs, and receiving no answer went up. I then noticed blood and I immediately called a doctor."

The next witness was Sergeant Wilfred Shrott, state police photographer. He took a photograph of the body at the undertaking room. He also examined the gun for fingerprints. He found no fingerprints on the gun. It was a .410 guage shotgun. In the gun were three shells, two full, one discharged.

Dr. Carl J. DePrizio of Mansfield was the next witness. He received a phone call at 5:20 on the afternoon of May 5. He went to the Murphy house and arrived in eight minutes.

He went up to the room and found the mother seated on one side of the body and the father on the other, he said.

DOCTOR DESCRIBES SCENE

One brother, he said, was trying to console the mother. Neither the father nor any of the brothers was displaying emotion, he said.

The doctor said he took one look at her and said, "She's dead," and nobody spoke. The left arm, he said, was crossed over her right on her breast.

There were no marks on the arm. The fingers of both hands were blood streaked.

He said he found a wound in the left chest about as big as a quarter. He said he noticed the letter lying on the couch between her left elbow and left hip.

He picked it up, noticed that it had not been postmarked and then dropped it.

He testified it was addressed: Miss Esther Johnson, Home for Crippled Children, Newtonville, Mass."

CLOTHING NOT MUSSED

He said the body was uniformly cold and that discoloration was setting in. There was then no rigor mortis.

He estimated the girl had been dead from two and one-half to three hours, which would place the time of death about 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

The gun, he said, was at the foot of the bed, leaning against the bed, diagonally away from the body, pointing toward the ceiling with the butt on the floor.

The hair and clothing, the doctor testified, were not mussed. He said this seemed peculiar to him.

COULD HAVE PLACED BODY

He was asked by Crossley if the body could have been placed upon the bed. He said:

"She might have fallen there but it also occurred to me that she might have been placed there."

The next witness was Percy W. Battershall of Attleboro, medical examiner. He said he arrived at the house about 6:20 p. m., then making a perfunctory examination, finding the position of the gun "not consistent with the picture."

He called in Assistant District Attorney Frank E. Smith because he thought the case was strange, he said. He repeated the father's story as related by the previous doctor.

REFUSED TO OPEN NOTE

Dr. Battershall said he noticed a note lying there and was about to pick up a nail file and open it when Smith shook his head.

He said a discussion was then held as to the propriety of opening the letter.

As a result of this discussion, Dr. Battershall said, the mother was called to the room and given the letter. He said she opened it and read it to herself. He quoted her as saying then:

"There is nothing that would throw any light on the case."

The medical examiner said the autopsy showed death occured about 3 or 3:30 p. m.

NO ACCIDENT, HE FEELS

He said that after an autopsy officials held a conference and decided that death was probably not homicidal. He said he found at that time that the accidental theory was "out" and that he still feels the same.

He said his examination indicated the gun was held within an inch of the skin surface over the heart and that death must have been instantaneous.

Halw of the heart, he said, was shot away. He said Miss Murphy could not have moved or have spoken—that death was a question of two or three seconds.

All her organs were normal, he testified.

MOTHER TELLS STORY

A week ago, he said, he heard one rumor, and last Wednesday night, another, that Miss Murphy had talked of taking her own life.

Mrs. Frederick Murphy, the mother, was the next witness. She said her daughter was "contented, never morose, always with a happy outlook."

She said her daughter was planning to attend Posse-Nissom school of the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital for further training as nurse. Mrs. Murphy last saw her in the room where she was found dead.

She said she was the companion and confidante of her daughter.

NEVER HAD BOY FRIEND

"She never had a steady boy friend; she was just another boy," said the mother, referring to the girl's athletic prowess in school.

Their last conversation, the mother related in tears, was about attending school.

"She counted on living," Mrs. Murphy said.

Mrs. Murphy said she returned from the baptism of a grandson that fateful afternoon about 5 o'clock.

She was taken upstairs and saw her daughter on the bed with the gun standing at the foot of the couch. She saw the letter lying there and officials asked her to read it.

She said she didn't want to but that authorities insisted, asking her to determine if there was anything pertaining to the death.

LETTER DISAPPEARED

She said she read the letter and there was nothing in it pertaining to the case. She said she could not remember what she did with the letter.

She said one of her friends told her she had en hr slip it undr a pillow on a downstairs couch.

She said it vanished from there and that no member of the household knows where it is.

Crossley termed the letter as "the most important piece of evidence in the case" and asked her if she could reproduce it as best she remembered. She did and this was the result:

"Dear John: (Miss Johnson?)

"Got home all right after a pleasant visit. I hope we can have another one soon. As ever, yours, Florence."

The mother was then asked to tell the story about the robin.

She testified Florence characterized the robin as a "messenger of death"—and that the robin has not been seen since she was killed.

ROBIN'S 'MESSAGE'

She said the robin had been coming to the window and tapping for a couple of weeks and after one of its visits Mrs. Murphy's sister-in-law had died.

At that time Florence had said:

"He's bringing you a message."

The bird always tapped at the window of the room where the girl was found dead, the mother said.

Annette Wins Quins' "Creeps"

By Universal Service

Callander, Ont., May 17 (US)—Annette Dionne holds the undisputed title of champion quintuplet.

Little Annette, who stole a march on her four sisters more than two months ago by cutting the first tooth, now holds the distinction of being the first to learn to creep.

On hands and knees, Annette scurries around the play den, while the other quintuplets look on in admiring amazement.

Emilie has almost accomplished the feat, but not quite. She can raise herself to her hands and knees, but that is as far as she can go.

All the babies, however, can "pat-a-cake" like experts, and all are enjoying new playthings.

Their favorites are the shiny mugs. To the quintuplets they are not mugs, but musical instruments, to be pounded and banged with gratifying discord.

P. O. CLERK HELD As Short Changer

He is charged with giving short change amounting to one dollar, in a postal transaction. He pleaded not guilty.

4 MEMEL NAZI MUST DIE

By Associated Press

Kaunas, Lithuania, May 17—The Lithuanian supreme court today upheld four sentences of death and 37 prison sentences imposed on German residents of the Memel territory who were accused of plotting to seize the territory for the Reich.

A charge of military preparation against Lithuania, on which one of the defendants, Baron von Der Ropp, was tried, was dropped.

Those to be executed, barring executive clemency or other intervention, are Emil Boll, Walter Preiss, Heinrich Wannagat and Emil Lepa.

Rubins Reindicted In Mail Holdup

Complaints charging Mr. and Mrs. Morris Rubin of Brighton with being accessories after the fact of the $129,000 Fall River mail truck robbery were dismissed by Commissioner Edwin C. Jenney in Federal court today. They were then formally taken into custody on indictments returned this week charging similar offenses.

The Rubins were returned to the East Cambridge jail, where they have been held for three weeks in default of $25,000 bail each. Monday they will again be taken into court for the setting of new bail.

HERO'S HOMAGE FOR PILSUDSKI

By International News Service

Warsaw, May 17—Sorrowing Poland honored Marshal Josef Pilsudski with a soldier's funeral today while the nation's armed forces paraded past his bier.

Fifteen thousand troops, led by the marshal's favorite charger, escorted Pilsudski's body through packed streets five miles from St. John's cathedral to Mokotower field after high mass.

Conspicuous in the military funeral array were hundreds of nuns and priests, two cardinals, three Mohammedan priests and three Rabbis. It was estimated half a million persons watched the procession. Floral offerings from foreign lands took half an hour alone to pass.

William C. Bullitt, American ambassador to Moscow, represented the United States. Foreign Minister Pierre Laval of France was there, and all important government officials and members of the diplomatic corps.

Hitler-Laval Parley Looms

(Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.)

Berlin, May 17—Persistent rumors that Pierre Laval, French foreign minister, will come to Berlin for conference at the invitation of Reichsfuehrer Hitler circulated today despite official deprecation.

A spokesman for the propaganda ministry said such a move was "hardly in the realm of possibility."

Diplomatic circles, however, asserted Hitler was becoming increasingly apprehensive of the welding together of Russia, France and Czechoslovakia in pacts of mutual assistance.

Developments of the past few days, they say, have encouraged the Reichsfuehrer to "talk turkey" with the French.

While the possibility of Franco-German conversations was being discussed, Rear Admiral Gadow, retired, confirmed reports that Germany definitely plans to create a submarine fleet.

Gadow, writing in the Deutsche Allegemeine Zeitung, of which he is the naval expert, said the new undersea craft would be of 250 tons.

HOW STRANGE! Not Mrs. Roosevelt

Washington, May 17 (AP)—It might easily have been Mrs. Roosevelt, but it wasn't, according to this story.

A girl member of the press gallery visited the Congressional Library recently, murmured to an attendant that she wished to take out a book about Mrs. Roosevelt, and added that her name would be found among accredited correspondents.

The attendant thumbed the pages, then shook her head.

"But I haven't told you my name yet," protested the writer.

"Oh, I thought you said you were Mrs. Roosevelt."

Taylor had been fired when he refused to accept the promotion to foreman on the grounds that he would have to resign his job as president of the union.

Nun Admits German Cash Smuggled to Pay U. S. Loan

By International News Service

Berlin, May 17—The desperate efforts of Catholic priests and nuns of the Order of St. Vincent to repay a $100,000 loan from a bank in St. Louis, Mo., were revealed today as the trial of two nuns on charges of violating Germany's stringent exchange regulations got under way here.

In the prisoners' box was Sister Verners, born Katharina Wiedenhoeffer, a pale and pitiful figure in her sombre garb.

She freely admitted violating the exchange regulations but stated she aided in smuggling money out of Germany for the sole purpose of repaying the American loan.

Hers was the first of some 50 similar cases to come to trial. Sister Sophie Freund, 58, a member of the same order, who is accused as an accessory, was ill and unable to appear in court.

Both have been held in prison since March.

In a low, halting voice, Sister Werners said the loan in question was obtained in order to complete a hospital at Cologne, headquarters of the order.

She is accused of transferring 202,000 marks to the Belgian branch of the order. The money was later sent to Holland and 70,000 marks of it used to swell the amortization fund against the St. Louis loan.

Treason against the "People's Law," as well as violation of currency restrictions, was alleged by the prosecutor.

Replying to a question from the judge, Sister Werners said:

"Yes, I am fully aware I violated the regulations.

"I proceeded to the border with 200,000 marks hidden in my clothes. I was not searched.

"I used 70,000 marks to reduce our St. Louis obligations and invested the remainder in Dutch securities."

CandleBurglar Visits 2 More

The candlelight burglar made two more breaks in Waltham during the night.

The homes entered are those of J. Lyman Bogart, 88 Lyman street, and Martin Nugent, 43 Harris street.

Nothing was taken, but tallow was found in both places. Joan Bogart, 16, said she had heard footsteps about 3 a. m. Entrance was gained by forcing windows.

These breaks make a total of 10—eight in Waltham and two in Weston—by the same burglar in three weeks. In a coal office, where a night light is burning, he left a note saying:

"No candle."

RICHBERG SEEN READY TO QUIT NRA POST

By Associated Press

Washington, May 17—One of the most meteoric of New Deal careers was declared today to be nearing a close.

Informed sources said that under an understanding reached some time ago Donald R. Richberg is to return to private law practice when the present NRA act expires June 16.

The informants, declining to be quoted by name, said Richberg would remain as chairman of the Blue Eagle recovery board only during the legislative reorganization of NRA now being studied in Congress.

If the new ERA is set up by June 16, it was said, Richberg will not head it. If the new law should not be passed by that date, the expiration of the present act would put Richberg's post and the whole NRA set-up out of legal existence.

OTHERS MAY QUIT

Besides Richberg, other NRA executives also are said to be contemplating early retirement.

Only yesterday, Senator Kirkley (D., Ky.) read to the Senate a letter from Richberg, saying he had accepted his post only temporarily and wanted to go back to private life.

Inquiry in some authoritative circles elicited the word that there was no prospect of his early retirement. Today, however, other circles said such a step was imminent.

Richberg's rise, during which he survived several storms, was rapid. A big-shouldered man who smiles a great deal and turns to music for relaxation, he was noted as a lawyer for the railroad brotherhoods in Chicago before he came to Washington as counsel for the Recovery Administration under Hugh Johnson.

ROW WITH JOHNSON

Johnson and he fell out while planning a reorganization of the agency, and after Johnson retired they exchanged barbs. Johnson called the Blue Eagle as "dead as a dodo" and Richberg said Johnson was a "popular humorist."

Richberg's New Deal star continued in the ascendant, however, and after being elevated to the post of director of the emergency council, he became widely known as President Roosevelt's No. 1 assistant.

'LEND' A DIME IDEA

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Edwin C. Hill

This "Send a Dime" foolishness, with all its ludicrous and annoying variations, had its beginnings back in the 90's and since that time has bobbed up periodically in all manner of forms and in all parts of the country.

In one case it got as far as the Supreme Court of the United States.

To Oscar Auton goes the doubtful honor of its creation. In the good old horse and buggy days, Oscar dealt in wagons in the hamlet of Gagetown, Tuscola County, Michigan.

Business being kind of slow, he conceived an idea, or borrowed it from somewhere, by which every household in the county would have a new buggy.

It was something like that slogan of 1928, "Two Cars in Every Garage," except that in Oscar's time the cry was "Two Carriages in Every Stable."

The energetic Oscar, knowing that it paid to advertise, slipped a little notice in the county weekly, which read: "How to obtain a $60 buggy for $3.75—see Oscar Auton." They came, they saw and they were convinced.

"Look here," said Oscar to Jed Simpkins, his prospect No. 1. "You give me $3.75 and I'll give you this coupon. Now you return the coupon to me with $15."

"Wait a minute," cut in Jed. "That's $18.75 not $3.75."

"Just hold your horses," countered Oscar. "You've given me $18.75; that's correct. But here I'm going to giv you a book with five of these coupons in. You go out among your friends and sell them these coupons. You get your $15 back, and I get the other $60. Then you're entitled to $60 worth of merchandise. Those that get the coupons from you can do the same. Simple, isn't it?"

Jed thought it was, and so did his five friends and their five friends. The buggy makers had a terrible job filling Oscar's orders because they didn't have assembly lines for mass production in those days.

America was headed fairly for the greatest carriage-making boom in history until the unexpected happened—the unexpected and yet the inevitable.

One man got a book of coupons, only to discover that there was no one left to sell them to.

He promptly went to law with Oscar over his $18.75, and the court supported him with the ruling that Oscar's idea was "essentially a gambling scheme."

The plague of chain selling, like the measles, flourishes every five years and gains headway until the doctor in the form of the Post Office Department, gets it under control.

Every conceivable form of merchandise—golf balls, automobiles, kitchen ware, lingerie, stocking, writing paper and pens —has been offered. The procedure is to overcharge for the product and to make each purchaser a salesman.

The salesman gets an attractive commission and an enticing prize. The sales roll along until the saturation point is reached.

In 1928, a hosiery concern appealed to the Supreme court to prevent the post office department from stopping its chain selling.

The lure in this instance was the hope of getting ten dollars' worth of stockings for one dollar. Like Oscar's buggy salesman, each chance taker was required to hazard the sum of $4 for four coupons.

The government counsel figured that before each adventurer, even up to the fifteenth link of the chain, could win the ten-dollar prize, additional investors to the number of 1,548,681,958, about the total population of the earth, would have to be found.

And from them would have to come the sum of $4,619,045,868. The Supreme Court ruled for the government.

"Have faith—have the faith your friend has and this charm will not be broken."

So sayeth the letter I received from Denver the other day asking that I send a dime to a young lady of that fair city and that eventually I would be awarded with 15,625 letters, each containing a dime, a total of $1562.50. I might have faith but I wouldn't have much hope of getting back my dime.

It seems there was a man named Ponzi who did this thing on a much grander scale. And before him, a man named Miller, who, in a small shack in Brooklyn, offered to pay 10 per cent interest a week, 520 per cent a year to all who would entrust their money to him.

He did it, too! Yes, for about a month.

Then the folks stopped sending in the money.

Miller stopped sending it out and went to Sing Sing as a guest of the State of New York.

His Answer to 2-Pup Order

By Associated Press

Great Barrington, May 17—John J. Nalty was plainly puzzled today on receipt of an order from the Philippines for two Great Dane pups.

Not because he didn't have the pups, but because he knew if he shipped them their puppyhood would be over before they reached Manila.

But Nalty, besides raising dogs, apparently has business sagacity to meet seemingly insurmountable obstacles. He answered his prospective customer's order with the suggestion that a mated female be shipped to Manila.

Nalty has figured it out that when the dog reached Manila she would have pups and Alfred Montello, superintendent of a sugar plantation, could fulfill his wish by making his own selection.

20,000 MEN DIED ON RUSSIA'S 'DEVIL ISLE'—SOLOVETSKY

The Russian Missionary Society of London, England, publishes a pamphlet under the above title, describing the horrors of the Soviet concentration camps in Russia.

It relates the personal experiences of a prisoner who escaped the cruel death which so many of his fellows suffered and fled to China.

Here follows a series of extracts taken verbatim from his narrative:

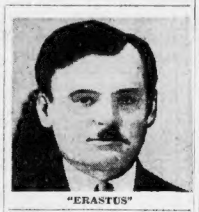
By "ERASTUS"

Author of "Solovky"

Fourth Installment

TORTURES ON SOLOVETSKY

IN general, human life in the concentration camps has no value whatever. A human being and an insect are treated alike. Criminals with the inclinations of sadists are given an unlimited power over the life and death of the prisoners.



"ERASTUS"

Remember that in the Solovetsky camps all the guards and overseers are former Tchekist-sadists (i. e., agents of the secret police), whose hands and hearts are stained with human blood.

They have had the full course of Tchekist training under such leaders as Dzerzhinsky, Yagoda and Unschlict. Remember also these Tchekists are terribly depraved and great drunkards.

Some thirty thousand prisoners are kept on the main Solovetsky Island, others are scattered on adjoining islands and along the shores of the White Sea. There is a narrow railway line on the island leading right into the midst of the forest. From there, by means of this railway, timber and wood are transported to the inhabited parts of the island.

There is a leather factory, a mechanical workshop, a joiners' workshop, a foundry, a factory for preparing outfits for the Red Army as well as for the prisoners. There are also many other industries, such as fisheries, salting-places, etc.

Everybody there is working without payment, but they receive their food ration and clothing and live in barracks which are dirty and filled with vermin and other insects, like bugs, cockroaches; in summertime the place swarms with flies and mosquitoes. Though the prisoners catch much fish, yet they have no right to eat it; they receive only the remains.

There were even times when the Government of U. S. S. R. bought at a low price fish of the lowest quality on foreign markets for the prisoners in the camps. At the same time the Soviet Government exported abroad their own take of fish.

The imported fish of bad quality was distributed not only to the prisoners, but also to the factory workers in many Soviet towns. The workers were thankful even for this in order to satisfy their hunger.

In the year 1929, on the Solovetsky Island, there were 29,000 prisoners—men and women. The greatest influx of prisoners is, as a rule, in the autumn.

During winter there is no communication with the island. It is some 60 kilometers away from the mainland. The White sea freezes only near the shore (some five kilometers), but the middle part of the sea does not freeze at all because of the tides.

In winter, now and again, an airplane with a special commission is sent over the island. Otherwise there is no regular mail service. There are just a few boats going between the island and the mainland, but these boat often perish on their way without ever reaching their destination. Sometimes they get caught by the tide in the ice fields, which carries them out to the open sea.

If they land pérchance on an island they try to give signals of distress from there to passing boats, but if the signals are not noticed then they die from starvation.

There were cases when such boats carrying the mail were tossed about on the sea until the people in the boat would freeze or die from hunger. I have been a witness of it myself.

In Autumn, 1929, there were 29,000 prisoners on the Solovetsky Island, but when spring came and the ships began to come to the island, it was found out that there remained only 9000; and even those were maimed and human wrecks. Amongst them there was one of the brothers Morozoff—belonging to the well known family of manufacturers in the Town Tver.

Thus in some five to six months 20,000 people perished out of the 29,000. Those who witnessed their death said that they were not buried each one separately, but that big ditches were dug and the dead bodies were thrown into them like rubbish, without any order, and when the graves were filled they covered them up with sand and frozen earth.

In one only of the Solovetsky camps 20,000 prisoners tortured to death found their untimely grave.

Many died from cold, not only through insufficient clothing for winter, but also through inability to accomplish their daily task and having to spend the night in the forest out of reach of the warmth of the bonfire.

Many died from starvation, for their food-ration was not nearly enough to keep them alive.

It was still worse with those of the prisoners who had no relations who could send them food-parcels.

Usually during the winter season the prisoners do not receive their food-parcels, though they may be sent at that time by their relations, for they are detained and piled up on the wharf of the town Kem to wait until spring.

But when spring comes there remains very little of them, for part of the products in the parcels is eaten by rats, part goes bad and sometimes the guards help themselves to the contents of the parcels. In such a way the prisoners get either their food-parcels with rotten products or only a very small part of them.

Many die from typhus. This is a terrible plague raging among the prisoners, the medical staff being incapable of fighting it.

800,000 VOTE ON KEEPING AAA NEXT WEEK

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

Washington, May 17—The first test of President Roosevelt's agricultural program, following the march of 3000 dirt farmers onto Washington and its angry repercussions, will be held next week.

On May 25, the wheat farmers in 17 states will decide by their ballots whether they want the wheat program of AAA to be continued or abandoned.

In excess of 800,000 wheat growers are expected to take part in this "election," which is advertised as the biggest and most important agricultural referendum ever undertaken in this country.

SEE AAA VICTORY

The AAA wheat program will be sustained by an overwhelming majority. At least, this is the confident prediction of the AAA officials and the rueful concession of their bitterest critics.

Two causes are ascribed to this assumptive outcome.

The wheat growers are, at least, receiving some income out of the wheat curtailment program and its processing tax.

Since the vast AAA program was inaugurated, a total of $943,000,000 has been given in various "benefit payments to farmers who have participated in the the several crop reduction systems. Of this amount, $162,444,000 has gone to the wheat growers.

WHEAT PRICE UP

Also, the price of wheat in the domestic market has ascended. In February of 1933, before the curtailment and processing taxes went into effect, the price of wheat was 32 cents per bushel. Prices paid farmers this month have ranges around 90 cents per bushel.

The other cause of the prospective victory for AAA is stated by its opponents. They say that AAA is the only program in existence; that no substantial alternative policy has been offered to the farmers. Secretary Edward E. Kennedy of the Farmers' Union states it this way:

"It is like asking the farmer if he prefers to be ill or to be killed."

AAA Denies Fostering March of Farmers

By Associated Press

Washington, May 17—Without waiting for the Senate to act on a resolution asking Secretary Wallace for information on who organized the recent farmers' demonstration in Washington and who paid their expenses, the AAA has struck backs at its critics with a vigorous denial that it fostered the "march" to the capital.

N.E. DEMOCRATS PRESENT NEW TEXTILE PLEA

By Associated Press

Washington, May 17—A delegation of New England Democrats headed toward the office of Secretary Roper today to tell the President's textile cabinet committee that the cotton textile situation was serious.

The conference, arranged by Representative Connery, dean of the New England Democratic House delegation, followed weeks of conferences between the cabinet committee and domestic manufacturers, and tariff commission hearings at which Japanese importers presented an argument against any increase in the tariff wall.

As the three-day hearing before the tariff commission ended the cotton textile controversy flared again in the House with an accusation by Representative Martin (R-Mass.) that this week's demonstration of farmers supporting the AAA was inspired by the agricultural adjustment administration.

Today's session of the New England House Democrats and the cabinet committee was expected behind closed doors.

Meanwhile, the Japanese, as represented before the tariff commission by two great agencies—Mitsui and Mitsubishi—pondered the advisability of requesting a hearing before the cabinet committee.

Hearings before the tariff commission, conducted under section 3-E (the tariff provision) of the National Recovery Act ended with a declaration by Charles A. Marshall, counsel for the cotton textile institute, that testimony of the Japanese had "verged on the insolent."

On the bench with Judge Gillen sat his newly-acquired associates—Judges Michael J. Murray, Elijah Adlow, Joseph T. ZOttoli, Leo J. Doherty and Francis J. Burke.

Barrymore, At 50, Escorts Girl, 19

By International News Service

New York, May 17—The mother of the young woman in question calls it "preposterous," but nevertheless the rumor persisted along Broadway today that John Barrymore would wed Elaine Barrie when, and if, he is divorced from his estranged wife, Dolores Costello.

Barrymore is 50; Miss Barrie, 19.

The pair, accompanied by Miss Barrie's mother, Mrs. Edna Barrie, have been seen frequently in Broadway night spots. It is reported the girl and her mother will accompany the actor on a cruise aboard his yacht.

The friendship between the theatrical and movie veteran and the girl started when Elaine penned a sympathetic note to Barrymore while he was ill in a hospital here a few months ago.

Since then Barrymore is said to have interested himself in Miss Barrie's stage ambitions.

The other night the pair auditioned for a broadcasting company in a Seakespearian play.

'TINY'S' SUIT GOES TO JURY

Salem, May 17—The suit of Miss Tyyne Neimi, 32, against Leslie Buswell of Gloucester, in whose home she was formerly a maid, went to the jury today after Judge Greenhalge's charge.

Miss Neimi, who claimed she was "railroaded" to an insane asylum, won a verdict of $14,750 two years ago.

The Supreme Court ordered retrial on the amount of damages alone, and that is all this jury will have to decide.

On the stand the former maid told her counsel to call her "Tiny."

LIQUOR STOLEN IN NORTH END

Thieves backed a truck up to a warehouse at 425 Commercial street today and carried away goods valued at more than $5000, including $2000 worth of imported whiskies.

They used the elevator to move the merchandise from the second floor to the loading platform.

The building is occupied by C. Pappas & Co., importers and grocers. A large part of the loot was Irish whiskey.

According to officials of the company, an inventory which is being made may reveal the loss as much higher.

Shipfull of Odd Beasts On Way Here

By Associated Press.

Halifax, N. S., May 17—A snarling congress of strangely named animals familiar to the Far East was in Halifax yesterday aboard the motorship Foylebank, consigned to the Chicago Zoological Park from a zoo in Khartoum, Soudan.

En route to Boston, the ship stopped off here to take on food, fuel and fodder.

The shipment, all desert animals, was the first permitted by the Soudan government in 25 years. The animals were of many species, including dorcas gazelles, dafessa waterbucks, white-haired waterbucks, ratelle or African honey badgers.

Other specimens included 25 antelope in eight different species which have never been seen in North American, storks, flamingoes, vipers, cobras, baboons, monkeys, strange desert tortoises, a egur-winged goose, bar-shouldered doves, lynx and snake-killing birds which are protected by the Egyptian government.

TEST SHOWS NO GROSS POISON

By Associated Press

New York, May 17—Dr. Alexander O. Gettler, city toxologist, announced today that he had found no traces of the deadly poison which another doctor reported he had discovered in a can of cocoa in the home of Frederick Gross, crippled bookkeeper.

Gross is charged with homicide in connection with the mysterious deaths of his wife and four children.

Gross' wife and the children died between March 29 and April 26 of this year. Gross was taken into custody after officials received reports that poison had been found in the vital organs of the dead woman and two of the children.

Subsequently, a physician reported to District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan that poison had been found in a can of cocoa at the Gross home.

Gross was employed by a chemical firm which handled the poison.

Dr. Gettler, after four days of analysis, reported total absence of the substance, a vermin exterminator.

ATHLETE HELD In Girl's Death

Haverhill, May 17—Hollis Gibbs, 38, manager of the Georgetown baseball team, was being held today as an accessory before the fact to the death of Miss Florence Caspar, 20, a shoeworker, who died in Gale Hospital of an illegal operation.

Help! Police!

Clinton, May 17 — Vandals wrecked police headquarters today during a five-minute absence of the police department.

Night Officer George Mortimer left the building at 6:55 a. m. to guard a mail truck.

Day Officer Martin O'Toole arrived at 7 o'clock to find guardroom windows smashed, a wall clock broken, all lights destroyed, ink spattered on desks, floors, walls and ceilings. The official typewriter had been used in a hammer-throw event.

CLICQUOT CLUB'S Full-Quart ANNIVERSARY!

GROCERY STORES, DELICATESSENS, AND DRUG STORES EVERYWHERE ARE FEATURING CLICQUOT CLUB THIS WEEK TO HELP US CELEBRATE!

UNTIL about a year ago, Clicquot Club Ginger Ale was sold in full-pint bottles. Then, we decided to have a large bottle too. And, having decided upon a large bottle, we naturally made it a really large bottle . . . not 27 ounces or 28 ounces, like so many so-called "quart" bottles, but a full, 32-ounce quart!

Our business during this last year has shown that people appreciate good quality and real, honest measure. We could not let this first anniversary of Clicquot Club's full-quart bottle go by, without expressing our thanks for your patronage. Clicquot Dealers, by the thousands, join us in this message!

Clicquot Club today is the same fine ginger ale it was a half-century ago! We are still drawing on the deep, rocky recesses of the earth for water so pure that chemicals are unnecessary. Jamaica's choicest ginger is still being blended with our aged taste-heighteners. And, of course, Clicquot gives you long-lived effervescence through carbonation under refrigerated pressure!

Hot, humid days are at hand. You will appreciate Clicquot Club more than ever, within the next few weeks. Imagine a tall, frosty glass of this fine ginger ale . . . tiny bright bubbles swirling and eddying. Here is a drink! Order a case of Clicquot during this full-quart anniversary week!

HUSBAND 'TIPSY' STORY WINS HER DIVORCE

When he took the marital vow to love George Agnew "for better or for worse," Mrs. Claudia M. Agnew of Commonwealth avenue, Allston never guessed she testified truly, in Suffolk Court, that it would "always be for worse."

George, she said, was drunk two or three times a week and was nasty, abusive.

Specifically she told the court:

"In March, 1934, my husband came home intoxicated and hit me in the face.

"Later, struck me again, knocking me down and causing my injury, as I fell against the bed."

Judge Frederick J. Dillon awarded her a decree and the right to resume her maiden name of Claudia M. Parent.

The divorce was uncontested.

Another petitioner was Mrs. Irene C. Greenwood of Huntington avenue, who testified that her husband Lester deserted her after five years of married life.

She was given custody of their only child.

PARKMAN FLAYS 'MOGUL' INNES

Charles H. Innes, Back Bay Republican leader, Arthur Race, hotel man, and Frank Sawyer, taxi magnate, were branded by Senator Louis Parkman of Back Bay today as "the high moguls of the taxi business who do the entertaining and get the votes to defeat bills before the Senate."

Parkman's blast amounted to a deliberate charge that Senate colleagues, after being entertained by the three men, voted against a bill which would "have abolished private taxi stands in Boston and given all cab men equal opportunity to earn a living."

The bill to establish public stands was rejected yesterday.

In moving today for reconsideration Parkman charged "a nice piece of stiletto work was done."

The Senate, 17 to 10, declined to reconsider.

Girl Slugged By Burglars

Confronted by two dapperly-clad burglars when she opened the door, Miss Caroline McIntyre, 28, of Coolidge Manor, Summer street, Everett, was slugged and knocked unconscious.

When she recovered consciousness, the burglars were gone with approximately $100 and jewelry.

Miss McIntyre had returned late to the fashionable apartment house. She turned her key and stepped inside, to see the two strangers.

Both wore light topcoats, gray hats and gloves.

"Put up your hands!" one ordered, drawing a revolver.

When Miss McIntyre was slow in complying, the other burglar hit her and she fell.

Today she was under the care of a physician, her face swollen and discolored.

Three other false key burglaries were reported. The burglars got cash and jewelry totalling about $100.

Victims: Miss Grace W. Mackie, an Everett school teacher, Samuel Dawson and Harry Pearlman, all in the Buckman Apartments, Buckman and Linden streets.

Wins Decree

Salem, May 17.—Mrs. Margaret R. Bagnall of 12 Ward street, Ipswich, was granted a divorce on the grounds of desertion by Judge Edward R. O'Brien.

Marriage 'Just for Worse'

She can smile about her marriage now. Because she isn't married any longer. This is the former Mrs. Claudia M. Agnew of Commonwealth avenue, Allston. Judge Dillon gave her a divorce in Suffolk probate court today, after she had told him how her George was mean and close to her and came home drunk and knocked her around. She's going to resume her maiden name, Claudia Parent. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

STRIKE TIES UP FRENCH SHIPS

By Associated Press

Le Havre, France, May 17—A platoon of mobile guards was assigned to watch the new super-liner Normandie today as the three-day old strike of French Line crews threatened to hold up her maiden voyage, May 29.

Union leaders met this morning to consider compromise proposals but the strike still was in effect when word was received.

A load of paper here was the first cargo Champlain, scheduled to sail, due before yesterday. Many of her passengers were transferred to the S. S. Paris, due sailing today.

French Cabinet Balks At Strikers' Demands

Paris, May 17. The Cabinet refused today to yield to the demands of strikers, maritime workers that they be guaranteed permanent employment and authorized William Bertrand, minister of marine, to carry the fight to a finish.

As Bertrand left the meeting, he said the government would not give in or compromise with the strikers and would demand that they resume work on the Champlain as a prerequisite to arbitration.

He said that if they refuse the Cabinet has empowered him to take necessary "disciplinary measures."

Blinded by War Bullet, Noted Artist Again Sees

By Universal Service

Paris, May 17—The light that failed for Jean Julien L. Mordant when a World War bullet pierced his forehead today had been restored by a delicate operation, decided on when a taxi accident, in which he was injured recently, brought the famous artist to the attention of specialists.

Seeing again after 20 years of darkness, the artist, some of whose pictures hang in American galleries, promptly exclaimed first of all:

"I can see now!"

It was Dr. C. Bietti, Rome eye specialist, who had performed the operation and was successful. As he left the plane to take up the artist's hand, he inspected it all over for traces.

Le Mordant was wounded in 1915. He joined the United States diplomatic service for the World War.

Among the French pictures in America are "Le Travail," and "La Parole Portant Vous" in the Metropolitan Museum; "Portrait of an Artist," in the Yale Museum, and "Light and Shadow" in the Chicago Art Institute.

Morgenthau's Bank Board

By Associated Press

Washington, May 17. Establishment of a new federal bank board to supervise the home loan system was announced today by Secretary Morgenthau in a statement to the Senate banking sub-committee.

Appearing at the request of Senator Glass, Democrat, Virginia, chairman of the sub-committee, the secretary declared he "favored the principles of the part of the omnibus banking bill giving the Federal Reserve Board control authority to conduct open market operation, by which credit is controlled."

But he went even further, adding that he would a board divorced entirely from political [illegible]

STUDENT SOBS OVER SLAIN BRIDE'S SHOE

By Universal Service

New York, May 17—White-faced Joseph Steinmetz, 22, a ministerial student, wept in court as the state produced a small blood-stained shoe taken from the body of his 17-year-old bride, for whose murder he is on trial.

The youth, whose two-week honeymoon ended with the murder of his bride, the former Ruth Armstrong, Hollywood movie extra, and a priest, the Reverend John Leonard, pleaded the unwritten law.

Samuel Leibowitz, representing Steinmetz, told the jury that young Steinmetz killed the priest and his young wife in a frenzy when he found them together in a midtown hotel room, acting "as any man would do."

State's Attorney Alexander H. Kaminsky charged that the youth had committed the double murder because of unfounded jealousy, and said that he had struck his young wife a few days before, when they were visiting friends in Brooklyn.

Two medical examiners and a police officer testified as to the wounds in the bodies, and said that the girl bride was clad only in a slip, brassiere, sweater, step-ins, stockings and one shoe when the body arrived at the morgue.

The priest, they said, wore a collarless shirt, athletic underwear, shoes and socks.

The prosecutor indicated he would attempt to show that the young defendant had removed part of the clothing of his two victims after the murder, to "set the stage."

DOMINICA FREES Italian Consul

Santo Domingo, Dominica, May 17—Premier Mussolini's threat to send a warship after Italy's consul, Amadeo Barletta, today had won Barletta's release from the jail where he was imprisoned April 4 charged with complicity in a plot against President Trujillo's life.

Barletta is free on bail and will be tried on the charge, it was announced. Barletta was the representative of American business concerns and the United States government had made representations in his behalf.

MAHER SPURNS ASTHMA CURE $50,000 OFFER

By Universal Service

Norwich, Conn., May 17—An amazingly effective treatment for asthma, discovered unexpectedly in a 30-year search for a tuberculosis cure, was announced here by Dr. Stephen J. Maher, internationally-known authority on tuberculosis, at a conference of the Connecticut Tuberculosis Association.

Dr. Maher's drama-packed report, combining elements of pure science and sincere humanity, and disclosing that he had turned down two commercial bids of at least $50,000 each to patent "a curative formula," explained the clinical importance of recent experiments with "the sons and daughters of the tuberculosis bacillus."

This newly discovered progeny of the deadly tuberculosis germ is destined to become man's greatest weapon against asthma and tuberculosis, according to Dr. Maher.

UNEXPECTED FIND

Three offspring produce an acid harmless to themselves, Dr. Maher said, but "apparently full of harm to the tuberculosis germs from which they are derived." He declared.

"At first my records showed that only a small proportion of my tuberculosis patients received any highly beneficial effects from treatment with this bacteria.

"As years passed I began to realize that the more striking improvements after the administration of the bacteria occurred in those patients whose tuberculosis was complicated with symptoms of bronchial asthma.

CURES SCORES IN FEW DAYS

"For asthma of all kinds it is the most efficient treatment of which I have knowledge. It has cured in a few days scores of cases of asthma of 20 years duration."

The 74-year old specialist explained the method by which he is able to transmute the bacillus into a pure strain beneficial to mankind which he named "A. Y. bacterin." He continued:

"It is with a great sense of pleasure that I welcome to my consulting room a patient suffering with severe asthma for no matter how famous the medical authority may be who has pronounced him incurable, I know that I can quickly cure more than 90 per cent of all cases of asthma simply by the oral administration of the A. Y. bacterin."

Dr. Maher has carried on this work with the assistance of three other well-known Connecticut physicians, Dr. Edward J. Lynch, Dr. Cole Gibson and Dr. Hugh B. Campbell.

PRIEST PLANS JUBILEE MASS

The Rev. J. Walter Lambert, pastor of St. Polycarp's parish, Somerville, will celebrate the silver jubilee of his ordination to the priesthood Monday.

In honor of the jubilee Father Lambert will be celebrant of a solemn high mass in St. Polycarp's church Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. He will be assisted by the Rev. Albert A. Jacobbe, as deacon, and Rev. John Kenney of St. Charles church, Waltham, as sub deacon. The sermon will be preached by the Rev. John F. Dunton, S. J. of Weston College, a boyhood friend.

A special choir of 40 voices will sing Gounod's Mass and at the Offertory, Cardinal O'Connell's "Juravitt," written especially for priests' celebrations, will be sung. The music will be under the direction of John Kiley, organist and choirmaster.

Father Lambert is a native of the South End of Boston, and was graduated from the Old Brimmer School on Common street, Boston College High school and Boston College, where he received his degree in the class of 1905.

First Debut of New Social Season

By BETTY ALDEN

SOCIAL FUNCTIONS seem to come in waves . . . a tidal wave of coming out parties, a rush of dances, a seemingly endless surge of fashion shows, and now outdoor flower shows . . .

Paradoxically enough, two of these waves will merge into one at the party at the Oakley Country Club next Thursday . . . Really this tea dance will be the official opening of the new debutante season, and the coming out party of Barbara Cole and Peggy Converse Capper . . . but, coming as it does, on the crest of the wave of garden flower shows, the party should be regarded as the occasion on which two of the first tender buds of this new season's bouquet of beds will burst into bloom . . .

BARBARA EATON

• • •

Pourers Named

MR. AND MRS. ARTHUR HARRISON COLE of Cambridge and Mr. and Mrs. Francis W. Capper of Brookline will give the party jointly in honor of their debutante daughters . . .

Barbara Eaton and Caroline Sampson have been invited to head the bevy of pourers which will include Betty Jane Thompson of Boston, Shirley Smith of Cambridge, Frances Briggs of Wellesley Hills, Elizabeth Ware of Boston, Sally Scudder, Gunvor Andersen, Lydia Johnson, Grace Westlake, Elsie Burroughs, Dorothy Dow and Dorothy Knowles . . . Most of these girls are classmates of Miss Cole and Miss Capper, both of whom will graduate in a few months from Miss May's School . . .

The narrow little by-ways of Beacon Hill buzzed with activity all yesterday afternoon as 250 garden lovers, each carrying a green ticket, trudged from one address to another, as directed on the back of the ticket, to peek at the tiny gardens which, surprisingly enough, nestle behind the imposing brown stone or red brick fronts which we all associate with Beacon Hill . . .

• • •

Touring Gardens on Beacon Hill

NOT SO FAR FROM the noise and confusion of downtown Boston, the courtyard opening from the dining room of Mrs. Robert Cushman's home on Mt. Vernon street presents a verdant and restful atmosphere . . . love birds, brilliant yellow canaries and a pair of gray doves add life and color to the cozy little nook where blue and white painted garden accessories harmonize with the huge clusters of apple blossoms and beds of vivid blue ageratum and yellow tulips . . .

In order to reach Mrs. Cushman's gardens, one has to pass through the living rooms of her lovely home where she graciously points out the highlights of her rare and famous antique collection . . . Here a fire screen painted in pastels by her great grandmother, Pattie Reed, or there a maple day bed of the 18th Century which has frequently been on exhibition at the Museum of Fine Arts, catches the discerning eye of those who appreciate the beauty and tradition of old furniture and knick-knacks . . .

Mrs. Guy Walker, wearing a blue silk suit with a beige fox scarf draped over her shoulders, was one of the many enjoying Mrs. Cushman's hospitality . . .

Further up the hill Polly Binney was escorting two out-of-town girls through the garden of Mrs. Edward Taft . . . Mrs. James M. Barnard of Brookline and the North Shore heard at first hand from Dr. Vernon Briggs the story of the beautiful iron gates which guard the entrance to his little bricked in courtyard . . .

Dr. Briggs acquired the gates a score of years ago and brought them to Boston from an old estate in Charleston. We have often wondered what lay behind those gates as we passed them and were just as pleased as many others taking the garden pilgrimage to be led right to them by the route printed on the back of our ticket . . .

• • •

Welch Garden Also Open

MRS. ELLERY SEDGWICK, whose old-fashioned garden was on the list of those open, was one of those we met at Dr. Briggs . . . Mrs. Briggs wore a light gray woolen dress with a red scarf and red hand on her gray hat . . . Mrs. Wilbur S. Grant was accompanied by her sister-in-law, as they paused to chat with Mrs. Briggs . . .

An outdoor living room, where one may lounge in a comfy chair and reach out to pick double ivory tulips with one hand while turning the pages of a good book with the other, is the little garden of Miss Elizabeth Pattee and Miss C. E. Peters . . .

Mrs. Lyman Whitney and Mrs. Joshua Merrill, Mrs. Alexander Macomber and Mrs. Paul Allis were among the many who were disappointed that the tiny garden of Mrs. E. Sohier Welch could be entered from an alley instead of through the stately Louisburg square house . . .

Jean Sears

Hostessing for Mrs. Welch, who is abroad, were Mrs. Wilder Wheelwright and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Bond Wheelwright . . . The latter Mrs. Wheelwright is Mrs. Welch's daughter, and will, with her young husband, spend this summer in Manchester close by the summer home of the Welch family . . .

• • •

Many wives of Harvardians will be left to their own resources this week-end while their collegiate husbands trek to Pittsburgh to attend the annual meeting and get together of the Harvard Clubs all over the world . . . the men will be feted with luncheons and banquets, with early morning golf dates to satisfy their zest for exercise . . . Nathaniel Ayer, the popular president of the Boston Harvard Club; James B. Conant, president of the university, and Dean Wallace B. Donham are among the 150 or so Bostonians who will attend the rendezvous.

Dr. and Mrs. Henry Sears have followed the open road to Manchester and with their daughter, Miss Jean Sears, are ensconced in their summer home there for the coming season . . .

MISS JANE LOCKE — MISS ISABEL NOYES

This Is Life

by ROBERT E. ROGERS

Highlights on the Byrd Welcome Home dinner at the Statler yesterday evening.

A gentleman conversing with A. V. Philpotts of the Boston Globe:

"This is the most representative group of Bostonians I have seen for many a year. Governor Curley has seen to it that everybody has been invited; society, everybody connected with the expedition, all their friends and loved ones and everybody in our community who belongs to and is interested in this great welcome to Admiral Byrd and his men."

Personally it Robert E. Rogers seemed to me that the honors were borne away at the Statler by the animal kingdom: by the Eskimo sledge dogs, quiet, docile, beautifully behaved, yet obviously capable of great strength and accomplishment; the beautiful milch cow from the Deerfoot Farms, that stood quietly chewing her cud, gazing acquiescently at the best of Boston society, as if she had never experienced the hardships of the Antarctic.

Yet even more was the honor borne away by the non-humanistic members of the expedition.

The essential honors of the dinner, that is, before the human speakers got up on their legs, were carried away by Mr. and Mrs. Penguin who, ensconced cosily on a huge cake of ice, listened without flinching to the loudest military music I have ever heard and received indifferently the homage of many of Boston's fairest and most celebrated.

They were, I understand, according to Admiral Byrd's testimony, the first of their kind to be brought back from the Antarctic and so are particularly the object of our interest and celebration.

Tech Heroes

A genuinely clamjamfry of all classes and interesting of Greater Boston; society happy to remember Richard Byrd as an old friend and associate of the past score of years; the parents and friends and best girls and even the children of the wind and sun browned veterans of the great expedition, happy as could be, proud as Punch, and unpretentious as only true democracy can be; scientific folk, military folk, newspaper men and all the most interested representatives of our democracy.

I saw two Tech technology men among the crowd, pointed out to me by Karl T. Compton, president of M. I. T.: a very diligent boy, Mr. E. H. Bramhall, in charge of all that pertains to physics, the cosmic rays, meteorology, and all that has to do with matters that are beyond the lay understanding.

The other Tech youth was Charles J. V. Murphy, in charge of radio communication of the expedition. What we heard from week to week of the life and adventures of the men of the expedition was due to him.

Governor Curley was at his happiest—and that means a very great deal—in his welcome.

Mayor Mansfield exhibited a hitherto unexpected—to this reporter at least—humor and felicity in his remarks.

The other speakers, all interesting and representative figures of the scientific aspects of the exhibition, gave specific anecdotes and highly interesting stories of the everyday doings of the long expedition.

Even although the most astonishing statements were made by the first speakers, these later speakers were striking—holding our attention in their individual testimony about their tasks and accomplishments over such a long period of time.

Patriotism, Pride

Assuming that most of the audience were not particularly experienced in the minutiae of such a scientific expedition nor even enormously interested in details of such a story, yet what was clearly observable in the celebration of last evening was the general sense of pride, patriotism, appreciation and human friendliness extended by the Bostonians of every class and social interest to their favorite adopted admiral, Richard E. Byrd, and his men.

There was a great deal of laughter—that essential evidence of social appreciation—and as much fine and unaffected applause at every moment when the proceedings, and they were frequent, allowed.

It was a great occasion for the guests and for the audience. Nothing could more clearly establish the fact that we love and honor Dick Byrd and claim him for our own.

RIFLEMEN GET HEARST CADET AWARD

By Universal Service

Los Angeles, May 17—Martial music and the thrill of the colors lent patriotic pageantry to an impressive ceremony in which the Harvard Military School and its crack rifle team were presented with the William Randolph Hearst awards for marksmanship.

The handsome silver trophy for the school and the beautiful gold medals for each member of the five-man rifle team were presented in recognition of the first place won by the team in the 1934-35 Hearst R. O. T. C. national rifle matches, ninth corps area.

In a speech of acceptance for the school, Professor Knute Hamilton, principal of the institution said:

"William Randolph Hearst and his associates are making a great contribution to national defense in fostering training and accuracy in shooting among the young men of the nation's schools and colleges."

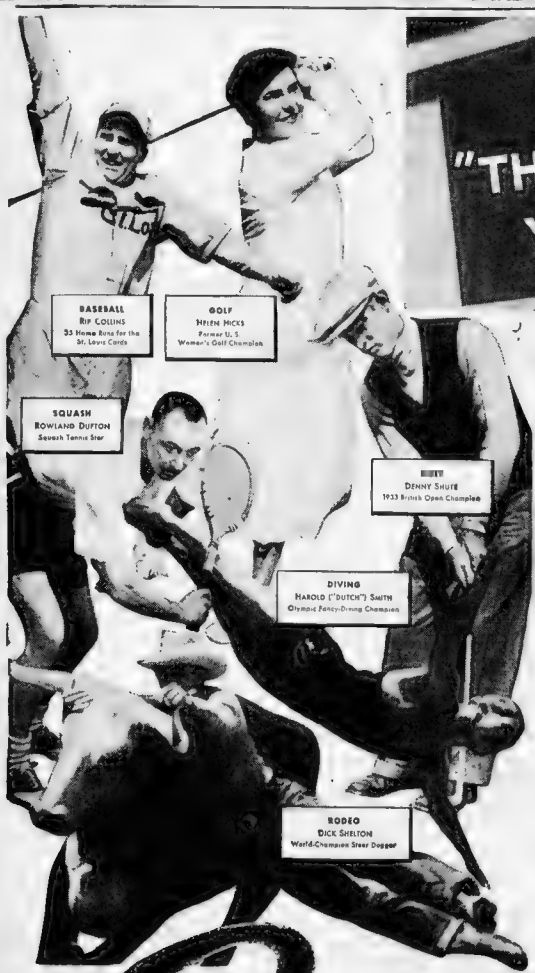
ATHLETES SAY: "THEY DON'T GET YOUR WIND!"

"CANDID CAMERA" close-up of Harold ("Dutch") Smith, Olympic Fancy High-Diving Champion, enjoying a Camel. He has smoked Camels for nine years—smoked Camels even before he took up diving. He says, "I'd walk a mile for a Camel." Among his teammates on the American Olympic squad who are also Camel fans are: Leo Sexton, Helene Madison, Jim Bausch, Bill Miller, Josephine McKim, and Georgia Coleman.



Read below what leading sports champions say about Camels

With the preference of star athletes overwhelmingly for one cigarette, that cigarette has to be exceptionally mild!

In the quality of tobaccos used, this cigarette stands at the top among popular brands. Its name is well known to you—Camel. Here's what an Olympic champion diver, Harold ("Dutch") Smith, says about Camels: "I've found a great deal of pleasure in Camels. They never interfere with my wind." Rip Collins, who lined out 35 home runs for the world-champion St. Louis Cardinals last season, says: "Here's the best proof I know that Camels are mild: I can smoke them steadily, and they never get my wind."

From the ranks of the squash stars comes this experience. Rowland Dufton, of the New York A. C., says: "Squash is a game that requires A1 condition for tournament play. I've found that Camels are so mild I can smoke all I want, and they never upset my nerves or get my wind. That's what I call real mildness!"

Dick Shelton, world-champion steer dogger, says: "I must be sure the cigarettes I smoke are mild. Camels are very mild—don't get my wind." And those two brilliant campaigners in the golfing wars, Denny Shute and Helen Hicks, have come to the same conclusion—"Camels do not get my wind."

How this mildness is important to you too!

Camel smokers can smoke more—and enjoy smoking more. You get more satisfaction, knowing that sports champions have found Camels so mild that they never jangle their nerves or get their wind.

YOU'LL LIKE THEIR MILDNESS TOO!

YOUR OWN PHYSICAL CONDITION—your wind... your energy... the good health of your nerves—is important to you too. So remember this: Camels are so mild you can smoke all you want. Athletes say Camels never get their wind or nerves.

SO MILD! YOU CAN SMOKE ALL YOU WANT!

JUNGLE GOLD -:- A New Novel of Thrilling Adventure -:- By Rex Beach

The Story So Far:

Steve Pentecost, soldier of fortune, returns from a gold-hunting expedition four days after his wife, Hannah gives birth to twins. He promises never to leave New Orleans again, but goes off to celebrate young Steve's arrival at Madame Vic's where he meets three adventurers plotting a revolution in Honduras; Gunner Mattern, professional soldier; Dan Marchand, banana grower; Manuel Garcia, Honduran patriot. They beg Steve to join them; he refuses because of his promise to Hannah. A well-known gangster visits the resort, picks a fight with Steve, who tosses him out a window. Steve escapes with the conspirators on their gun runne Spies have tipped off their filibustering expedition and seven days out they are attacked by the Progreso, handsome gunboat. Steve boards the Progreso and captures it single-handed. But the victory is costly for the Progreso has to be used to tow the crippled Carataca and the conspirators realize they must strike quickly to overthrow President Salazer. Steve's bold plan to capture Puerto Cortes and march straight through Honduras to the capital is adopted. Steve and Mattern, leading 60 men, attack the Honduran Commandante, Colonel Quiche, and his 800 soldiers. Steve's high courage and Mattern's murderous machine-gunning bring about the quick capture of Puerto Cortes. A lone sniper is popping at Steve, who rushes the barracks and discovers Quiche's mistress, Mamatoca, dazzling, exotic native beauty. After the capture of Puerto Cortes, Pentecost is made a general and marches toward Tegucigalpa with 1500 men. The city of Tegucigalpa falls before Steve and his men. They seize the capital and await the arrival of the new President Garcia. Mattern disobeys the command of Steve and loots a convent. He is deserted by Steve, who orders him executed. But Mattern draws and fires at Steve and then flees. Steve is seriously wounded and for days is near death.

During the years since her arrival at Tegucigalpa, Hannah had watched her husband and his chief weld a nation together.

Garcia had promulgated many reforms; it was Steve's hand which had carried them out.

Their task was not easy, there were malcontents to reckon with, occasionally force had been necessary and at such times there had been anxious hours at the palace

The revolution itself had been child's play as compared with the task of reconstruction. But Hannah had seen those reforms put through.

Times were growing better now; Manuel Garcia had indeed proven himself to be a patriot.

Hannah herself had grown. The New Orleans school teacher was gone; a new maturity was blooming through her youth

Her position had lent her poise and despite the incompletenss of her married life, she had grown beautiful in the happiness of her husband's occasional presence.

Steve Restless

Her rich, dark hair now framed an oval face out of which wide-brown eyes looked steadily and understandingly at a world of which she was an important part.

Steve actually came to her for help nowadays; he relied upon her for a depth of understanding of which he was lacking.

Had she been able to break the voodoo spell of the jungle, to wean her husband away from it, her life would have been glamorously full.

She realized today that Steve was restless once again and that the bush fever was mounting in him.

For some time he had been talking about a tour of the coast ports, a visit to his banana farms.

Things were not going to his satisfaction there. Marchand wanted to see him and municipal affairs at Cortes needed attention. Excuses all.

Hannah knew what the trip would mean; weeks of silence, perils of a hundred sorts, dirt, sweat, a complete reversion to the primitive.

It was as if he dedicated himself, soul and body, to certain secret Mayan rites; as if he made a pilgrimage to hidden temples in the bush, there to participate in pagan ceremonies.

Hannah suspected that he himself was unaware of the hunger in his soul and unconsciously invented those pretexts to get away, to lose himself for the time being in trackless places.

That Jungle! To Hannah it had become a stealthy, unholy thing which she feared and distrusted.

When he again referred absent-mindedly to his coming trip she said:

"I presume there is no reasoning with you. You won't listen to me, only if it is not absolutely necessary—"

"It is," he declared. "I hear Mattern is back."

"Steve!" There was an instant of silence during which Hannah's color faded.

In a strained voice the wife said, "After all these years? Surely you don't intend—? I mean it—it would be dreadful if you met."

"Rather dreadful for him," Pentecost agreed.

"Is that why you're going?"

"It's one reason."

"But, Steve! You mustn't take this on your shoulders; it's a government matter. There's a price on him. Does the Chief know about this?"

"I haven't told him and I don't intend to. 'Government matter,'" Steve laughed harshly and Hannah eyed him with growing apprehension.

Finally she said,

False Alarm

"I can't believe it. He wouldn't dare."

"Exactly! It's probably a false alarm. He is a tough hombre; he may be in Barrios but I don't think he'd risk a return to Honduras. Still, when a man's broke, he'll take chances."

"How do you know he is broke?"

"I know all about that cabron; I've made it my business to know.

"He was kicking around Colombia for a while, then he got in with the Tiblier people.

"Lately he has been handling some confidential business for them in Costa Rica.

"The market value of machine gunners has fallen off but, knowing this country as well as he does, he'd naturally drift into the fruit business.

"That means war with Marchand."

With difficulty Hannah managed to say,

"And you've been waiting for the time—waiting for a meeting?"

"Sure!"

"I'm going to tell the President tonight."

"Please don't." Steve spoke quietly. "There may be nothing in it. If Don Manuel suspected that fellow had set foot on Honduras soil he'd lock me up, he'd invent some excuse to keep me here.

"That wouldn't do, for Marchand is having real trouble. I'm wondering if Mattern may not be at the bottom of it.

"In any event it concerns me, too, for business as well as personal reasons.

"The truth is I'd be on my way now if it weren't for this blasted banquet tonight.

"But don't you worry, dear," he kissed Hannah, "I promise nothing will happen to me. Nothing ever does."

"No!"

At the tone of this exclamation the husband laughed.

"Anyhow, don't let it spoil the party for you." He scowled darkly and spoke with deep feeling. "How I hate these state functions."

"You shouldn't hate this one. The President is doing a lovely thing for you."

"But—I don't want a sword!"

"You'll want this one. It's beautiful. I've seen it."

"Now if he'd give me a machine—"

Pomp, Politics

"At least I appreciate the honor."

"My dear, don't you understand it's all pomp and politics? Just a pretext."

"Don't. You hate public speeches, that's all. You hate to dress up. Nevertheless the Chief is doing you a high honor tonight and you must receive it with becoming dignity."

Steve jerked fragrantly. Steve wrinkled his nose.

"Your son can take it to Harvard with him. Now then, have you prepared your speech?"

Steve acknowledged sullenly that he had not done so.

"Hadn't you better get at it? The sample you just gave me was pretty bad."

Hannah smiled, then approached towards the door.

"My pet, you're unusually peevish because you can't get away. This trip is your honey when he closed his eyes he saw dim trails twisting through a maday gloom, or beheld himself poised upon some commanding eminence with the forest spread out below him like a mammoth undulating carpet of green.

Underneath that impenetrable canopy of leaves was a dark region which he knew perhaps as well as any white man in the tropics but always it had an enchanted mesa, a rosy plain outspread in the sun and he longed to make it his.

Pyramids of Chalk

Frequently, too, he saw in his mind's eye Mayan temples rising like pyramids of chalk in the moonlight, down their steps came priests in feathered headdress passing between rows of warriors in cotton armor.

The priests were followed by a parade of singing women among whom was a girl, slim, erect.

Mamatoca moved towards Steve with the rippling grace of a panther, fearless but unafraid. Slowly her eyes were lit by a dull flame to well like burning brandy in a snifter. That was the simile he had invented.

It was a moment's gaze and a lingering turn over in Steve's coal-bread.

Still how he could resist Mamatoca out of the bend of his arm instead of those first few nights in Cortes

He longed now for the girl and he had a plan. It was about to get wondering if Steve could bend a priest's will to his own and cast a spell over him.

Certainly she was more real more vivid, more alive now than ever before had been

The urge to roam has struck Steve again. What will happen if he meets Mattern? What new spell will Mamatoca hold over him? Continue the story in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.

HOLLAND

By GEORGE HOLLAND

An honest little showman, with many of the great qualities of his famous father, young Charlie Foy pulled stakes from Boston today after a highly successful week with his tabloid revue at the Orpheum.

It's not much of a time to be talking about Charlie Foy's show, as Philadelphia papers do not take the trouble to copy this column, and it is in Philadelphia that Charlie finds himself for the comingseven days.

George Holland

* * *

But the combination of Foy and George Arliss in "Cardinal Richelieu" proved a highly attractive combination at the ticket-takers' stalls, and more than an ordinary number of patrons crammed the popular old house all week.

Charlie Foy is a trouper who keeps working and trying. Many years have passed since he and the other little Foys appeared on the stage with Father Eddie.

The family is scattered over the country. Bryan is doing all right in Hollywood and Eddie Foy, Jr., can work on Broadway when he is of the mind.

* * *

It was Bryan Foy who wrote that famous song, "Oh, Mr. Gallagher, Oh, Mr. Shean!" It sold hundreds of thousands of copies and Bryan benefited exactly to the sour tune of $500. He then sold it outright. He has been successful in directing pictures since that time.

Eddie, Jr., was featured by the late Mr. Ziegfeld, and the names of this pair of Foys held more lustre in show-business than that of Brother Charlie. But Charlie is always working, and he's doing all right.

* * *

I caught Charlie on the wing early today as he was boarding a bus with his troupe, for the next stand. He beamed.

"See, you had to come to see me before I left town," he exclaimed. "I knew you'd be around and I told Jack Granara to expect you."

The only answer to that was an apology for the late appearance, with the usual palaver about being here and there and trying to make it and just missing.

* * *

Charlie grinned, and when he grins his face is split from ear to ear.

"Never mind all that," he said. "You had to come to see me. And any time a Foy comes to town you'll be around all right, all right."

I said something about that being very true.

"You can't duck it," he said. "Or the old man will never forgive you."

Eddie Foy, Sr., died seven years ago—at 71. We used to go to the fights together.

* * *

Thursday night at the Orpheum is featured by the appearance of a half-hour's run of amateurs. Earle Nelson runs the proceedings. A colored girl whose name I missed is absolutely sure-fire as a singer. She is ready now for the Broadway music halls and might make the grade in a revue—with not too much coaching.

Hollywood Gossip

Hugo's "Ninety-Three" Will Be Filmed

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service)

Los Angeles, May 17—Hal Wallis' ambitious plans for producing Victor Hugo's "Ninety-Three" for Warner Brothers sound intriguing and interesting. Hal has such ideas for this story, which is laid in 1793 during the first years of the French Revolution.

Robespierre, Danton and all the historical characters we have read about will be represented and chosen with care when casting time arrives.

Louella O. Parsons

"Ninety-Three" is to be one of the most pretentious of the 1935 products for Warner Brothers and it will be put into work immediately. There are lots of big things in contemplation at the Warner Brothers these days, among them "Twelfth Night" for Marion Davies, which is fast becoming a reality, with Max Reinhardt as Max's director.

* * *

Spencer Tracy, looking like a million dollars, is reporting at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios every day. Irving Thalberg has his way, Spencer's name will be electric-lighted throughout the world within the next year.

He will not only play the male lead in "Riff Raff" but he will be the chief reason for "Plunder," a story of high finance which Larry Weingarten, who has been very ill, will produce. Karl Detzer, novelist and short story writer, has been signed to prepare the scenario for Tracy, who swears he will be a good boy.

* * *

One of my favorite comedians in all the world is Willy Howard of the "Follies." I can laugh at anything he does. I am his best audience. Maybe he doesn't know it but honestly I may write him a fan letter any minute. Well, Willy arrives here Saturday for a part in "Rose of the Rancho" with Gladys Swarthout and Joan Boles.

* * *

Chatter in Hollywood: One of the best known actresses in Hollywood, or anywhere else for that matter, is backing Jed Harris in his motion picture productions. And, believe it or not, there is no romance in this arrangement. She is lending him a young fortune to make his picture because she believes in him. It's a business proposition, pure and simple.

I might add that Mr. Harris' backer is one of our best business women in the motion picture industry. I doubt very much if she herself will appear in any of the Harris productions.

* * *

I spent some twenty minutes on the set of "Manquerade" watching Louise Rainier in her first scene before a camera. I have never seen such patience and sweetness as Robert Leonard, her director, displayed in coaching her. William Powell carefully explained to her the American meaning of each word. She is a fascinating little person, this Rainier, with an amazing facility for grasping lines and an eagerness to do her part well.

For Love, Justice and Uncle Sam

"G Men" Triumph Anew On Two Screens

By JOYCE DANA

The dynamic Jimmy Cagney is on the right side of the law in "G Men," Warner Bros. tense and exciting tale of the government's war on crime, now on view at both the Paramount and Fenway.

In the companion picture, Edward Everett Horton supplies plenty of chuckles in "$10 Raise," an amusing story of a timid Romeo and his financial difficulties.

Cagney, alert agent for the Department of Justice, fights it out with gangland in "G Men," and says it with bullets.

Taken largely from newspaper headlines supplied by the Lindbergers of an outraged nation, here's a striking authenticity to all this melodrama. No gangsters are glorified, no sypmathy and sentiment are misdirected.

Instead, there's the likeable Cagney, in the best role he's had, a story bristling with action, a hefty romance with Margaret Lindsay, and a few genuinely laughing moments by Ann Dvorak, as the dancing girl who married a killer.

Robert Armstrong, Barton Mc-Lane, William J. Harrigan and Lloyd Nolan give vivid performances in other roles.

* * *

With Edward Everett Horton as meek and mild office bookkeeper, "$10 Raise" takes a goodly improbable story of love among the ledgers and makes it consistently laughable affair.

Horton is Hubert T. Wilkins, all daring either to ask his girl when kiss or his boss for a raise, both of which he rates.

All the stock-holding comic situations are hauled out, and Horton dusts and polishes them off with a hat they're funnier than ever. He gets gloriously drunk on too many stingarees. He gets forced by a big cat and swamp man who sells him four lots under water, into which he promptly tumbles, literally as well as figuratively.

And when the liquid acreage turns out to have valuable oil properties, he takes his hundred thousand dollars and tells his crusty old boss where to head in.

Karen Morley can act, but she doesn't have to here, where she's just a sympathetic and decorative foil for Horton's wit.

Alan Dinehart is the fast-talking sharper, Berton Churchill the raise-hesitating boss, and Glen Boles and Rosina Lawrence supply a little more romance.

Soloist at Bradford

Betty Bryant

Betty Bryant, whose songs are a feature of Hughie Barrett's entertainment at the Grill of the Hotel Bradford, made her first professional appearance during a vacation trip to Honolulu.

Miss Bryant attended the University of California and appeared before the microphone from a Honolulu station shortly after her graduation.

After a season in California clubs and with some of the West Coast's big name bands, Betty came East.

She has appeared in New York at the Central Park Casino and the Caveau Esseque and has been featured with Reggie Child, Xavier Velasco, Jaen Goldkette and other noted orchestra leaders.

Film Moves To Boston

"The Informer," RKO Radio's film based on the famous Liam O'Flaherty novel, moves from the Keith Memorial to the Keith Boston today.

This powerful drama has Victor McLaglen in the role of Gypo Nolan, a big, dull-witted Dubliner who "informs" on his pal, wanted by the Black and Tans for murder.

Marcot Grahame, Heather Angel, Wallace Ford, J. M. Kerrigan in the cast.

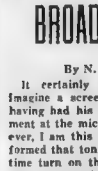
BETTE DAVIS IN FIRST RADIO BROADCAST

By N. F. T.

It certainly isn't easy to imagine a screen star not yet having had his or her big moment at the microphone. However, I am this day reliably informed that tonight is the first time turn on the air (WNAC) for Bette Davis, the lovely to look at blonde beauty of film-land.

Her debut is in connection with that weekly "Hollywood Hotel" hour, wafting out of the West between 9 and 10 o'clock.



Initial bowing to the coast to coast air audience holds no terror for Bette, they say, which is also quite unusual. Most every stage and picture personality likes to have it and hear it said how their nerves percolate just previous to a nation-wide broadcast. Louella Parsons, distinguished Hollywood cinema columnist for your favorite evening newspaper, will introduce Bette. Dick Powell does the ceremony matching while Raymond Paige provides the orchestral offerings.

UMPIRE UTTERANCES

Dolly Stark, who in 1931 was voted the outstanding umpire in the big leagues by fellow umpires, will be a guest at the "College Prom" broadcast this evening (WBZ) at 8:30. Ruth Etting and Red Nichols' orchestra will, as usual, be starred on the musical portion of the program.

* * *

Dr. William Allan Neilson, president of Smith College, will be heard in a brief address over Station WAAB and associated stations of the Yankee Network tonight from 7:45 to 8. The subject of Dr. Neilson's discourse, "The Place of the Arts in a Women's College," is one that is likely to stir considerable interest during these times of feminine progress in the arts, in science, and in business.

* * *

Phil Baker, the self-styled jester, and his troupe of radio entertainers, who have been presenting their Friday night performances from the spacious Radio City studios in New York for the past five months, are going to be back in their old quarters in Chicago sound auditoriums beginning this evening (WBZ) at 9:30.

CONCERT CLASSICS

Schubert's ever-popular "Serenade" will be Jessica Dragonette's initial soprano solo during her weekly concert period (WEEI) tonight at 8:00 p. m. For her other solos, Miss Dragonette has chosen Liszt's "O When I Dream," and "Sweet Song of Long Ago."

She also will be heard in the duet "Once Upon a Midnight" by Spina. Ross Graham, baritone, is to sing "Home On the Range"; the quartet will harmonize "Rainbow" by Archer and Nevin's "Narcissus." Highlights by the orchestra under Rosario Bourdon's baton, include Rossini's Tancred overture, "Youth in May," Chopin's "Polonaise Militaire" and Paradise, from Bizet's celebrated "L'Arlesienne" suite.

CYCLE ENGINE Sets Glider Record

Paris, May 17 (AP)—Robert Kronfeld, Australian glider champion, landed his sail plane equipped with a five-horsepower motor-cycle engine, at Le Bourget today after a 210-mile flight from Croydon, England.

The flight took four hours and six minutes and probably established a record for air economy. The gasoline consumed cost $1.60.

RADIO QUERIES AND ANSWERS

Q—Is Francina White, on the "Beauty Box" program, really Gladys Swarthout under another name? If not, where is Gladys?

M. H. of Dorchester.

A—No; it is really Francina White. Miss Swarthout is in Hollywood making pictures at present.

Q—We are anxious to know who is the higher paid artist, Bing Crosby or Dick Powell? What could one obtain a picture of Lanas Travers and Carl Moore?

Hearers, of Holyoke.

ADVICE on LOVE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX and NELL BRINKLEY

Father's Tyranny Prejudices Girl Against Marriage

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A GIRL and her mother have each written me a letter, and if the contents of these two communications were shown, no one would be more amazed than the husband and father, who is the subject of them.

Doubtless his neighbors regard him as a worthy and highly respectable citizen. He pays his taxes, is law-abiding, a member of the church, and contributes to the local Community Chest.

But he has been such an absolute tyrant in his own home that his 19-year-old daughter dreads to marry, for fear her husband may have some of the characteristics of her father.

The mother inherited property, which she foolishly turned over to her husband when she married. This he has managed, sometimes badly, without consulting his wife. And he has never given her any allowance.

The mother and her daughters are dependent on a well-to-do member of the family for their clothes, and the girls could never have the education they wanted because father had lost so much of mother's money in the stock market.

NO FUN AT HOME

No company, especially boy friends, parties or any sort of informal gatherings, are permitted in this home. But the father does not hesitate to take expensive hunting and fishing trips when he feels that his health requires a little change. These trips necessitates the renting of a boat, and and father pays his share like a gentleman.

It would bore you to repeat all the petty tyrannies, recounted in the letters, to which the mother and daughters have been subjected. The head of the house does not even permit books to be taken from the public library, because they might take frivolous novels, and these might inspire the wife and daughters to be frivolous, too.

The girls may not sing in the church choir, because they might meet young men, and father does not wish them to marry. But in spite of all his caution, laws and regulations, the older daughter has got herself engaged.

SECRETLY ENGAGED

How did she manage to do this? She sneaked. The whole town was sorry for these women, and when father was away on his fishing and hunting trips to restore his health, kind neighbors gave parties for the girls, with the result that the girl, aged 19, is engaged, and the younger one, 18, has every hope of following in her sister's footsteps.

The question now is: Will the older sister's fiance ever be like father? If there is a possibility of this, the girls prefer to be spinsters all their lives.

But, thank goodness, men such as this husband and father are becoming more and more rare. They were quite common up to the Victorian era, to judge by the then contemporaneous novels.

And while I am delighted that one of these girls is going to escape that household within the next two or three weeks, and be married, still I'm wondering if these too, too patient women are not in a way to blame for such a state of affairs? When you find a man such as this one is described to be by the women of his own family, isn't it very largely the fault of the women themselves?

BREAK HIS POWER

Why do they submit to such narrow-minded, bluebeard tyranny? Once a man gets that kind of power over his family, and he's convinced that it's his chief duty to discipline them, there is very little chance of any freedom.

But why, when a woman finds herself married to a man of this sort, doesn't she stage her uprisings early and often?

Bullies have a way of regarding themselves as deities. They like to deal out thunderbolts, laws, proclamations, commands. What they need is a lady who will "show them."

Docile women are the worst medicine in the world for domestic tyrants.

Weathering Through

By Nell Brinkley

MOST of us have had a long time now to watch the queer and worrying days that have been called the Depression, and the married people who have been going through it.

Poor old Cupid has wilted badly some places with some folks, but it's kind of marvelous to see in how many rowboats carrying double through the storm he has come through with nothing but a few bruises and a drenching. He wings are draggle-tailed, but he is still crowing!

That's because there was REAL LOVE in the boat, and not the poor imitation.

A man and a woman can come through anything, even the littlest end of the tightest squeeze of hard times, if they can clasp hands with real love.

And real love means affection, too, and admiration, and tenderness, and kindness, and many other things of value besides. A capacity for sticking. And liking to do it.

In spite of the daily advice on this page of ours, there is a truth that has to be said, should be said. There are people, man and woman, roun1 about the world who should never marry. The things that go with marriage are not for them. They can't make good "partners."

And for the sake of the other one in the boat they should stay on shore, heart-loose and fancy-free. They cannot help pull even in sunshiny weather. So what will they do in a squall?

NELL BRINKLEY.

A TRAY OF TASTY APPETIZERS

MAKE THESE GAY SAVORY TIDBITS!

HOW TO BE a popular hostess? Try a tray of canapes and hors d'oeuvres at your next party.

Watch your rating rise, as your guests delightedly choose their favorites.

Let's see, now, what's in our illustration! The big grapefruit in the center of the wooden tray is stuck with shrimps and olive-and-bacon-tentellers on toothpicks. The shrimps have been chilled in highly seasoned French dressing, and before we eat them, we'll dip them into a nearby bowl of mayonnaise. The olives rolled in bacon strips are grand as they are, for they've been baked just crisp enough in a hot oven.

Now for one of those black and white Russian canapes. They're the 2-inch triangles (made of rye bread) first spread with thick sour cream, then centered with chilled caviar that has been seasoned with grated onion and lemon juice.

Here's how to make those dainty Belmont fingers (the oblongs pictured). Combine 1 package (three ounces) cream cheese with 1 tablespoon prepared horseradish. Add 3 slices crisp bacon, chopped fine. Spread on Graham bread (2½ inches by 1 inch) first spread with creamed butter. Garnish with a slice of stuffed olives in center, and minced parsley across corners.

The last tidbit (Louisiana circles) is a 2-inch circle of toast, spread with creamed butter flavored with lemon juice and grated lemon rind. On this is centered a circle of hard-cooked egg white, heaped with a mixture of chopped shrimps, mayonnaise and minced green pepper.

Um-m! Doesn't all this make your mouth water? Then you should have our booklet, APPETIZERS, HORS D'OEUVRES AND SANDWICHES! From this you will get literally dozens and dozens of new food ideas to surprise your friends. Many actual recipes, many tips and suggestions for serving, whole, easy and inexpensive menus for afternoon and evening affairs. Given in Marriage

(CHAPTER 317)

I DID NOT have to wait long for the key to Lillian's insistence that the Chinese, whom we had brought from the glade, be kept bound and gagged until Lee Chow or Hugh Grantland could talk to them.

At her vehement protest, my father smiled at her reassuringly.

"Have no fear, my dear," he said a trifle grimly. "Their gags and bonds will not be removed until we have expert advice as to the best method of dealing with them."

I had time only for a lively wonder as to what expert advice he hoped to get from Lee Chow, delirious, or Hugh Grantland, wounded and in a surgeon's hands, before he spoke again.

"Now I suggest, Lillian, that you take Margaret upstairs and make her lie down for a little while." She has been through a terrific ordeal this morning. I am going up now to see Lee Chow and Hugh, so I will not need her for anything."

"I don't know anything about Lee Chow," Lillian returned, "but Hugh is asleep, and I am sure Dr. Smithwaite will not permit him to be disturbed."

"He may have wakened by this time," my father said imperturbably, then added an imperative injunction to me.

"Margaret, please go up with Lillian at once."

"Yes, father," I said meekly and he turned abruptly and went out of the door, closing it after him.

Lillian looked after him, a quizzical smile played around her mouth.

"The obstinate old darling!" she said. "How he hated to be contradicted! He wouldn't think of disturbing Hugh himself, but he reared like a balky horse at the idea of anyone else having any authority over the dear boy. It was all my fault. I never should have used the word 'permit' with your father as the object, direct, or indirect. He always has to be the subject of the verb." She smiled again as she slipped her arm through mine saying:

"But you're going to be the object of my maternal care, and I don't mean maybe! Come along up and I'll tuck you in bed."

I went with her without objection—for after my father's ultimatum I knew it was useless to protest his dictum—at least as far as my room. But, once inside, I turned to Lillian resolutely.

"You must know I can't possibly go to sleep," I said.

"Of course, I know it," she retorted, "but I wasn't going to say it out loud with the chief listening in. And as long as you aren't in evidence in the hall or anywhere that he can see you, what he doesn't know won't hurt him. I'll go out after a bit and report you 'resting comfortably,' as they say in the hospitals.

"Why sentry-go?" I asked.

"To see that no one gets down stairs for a while," she replied promptly. "Luckily, they're all so sleepy from last night that only your Avis and Samuel Brixton have shown their faces as yet. Of course, I don't count Mother Graham, taking care of Baby Faith, or Dr. and Mrs. Braithwaite, in the library with Hugh. But the rest of them, even including Marion and Carolyn whom we routed out to help us, are back pounding their respective ears.

"I took the liberty of going into executive session with Katie," she went on with a grin, "and she agreed with me that breakfast trays to the rooms would be marvelous idea this morning. So I'm patrolling the hall ready to flag the toothbrush parade to the bathrooms and broadcast the news of the breakfast trays. I've already sent your Avis and Samuel Brixton to await their trays."

Are you serving a MINUS MEAL?

Many wives, unknowingly, serve "minus meals." The food is good, and well cooked. But it has little or no "bulk"—needed to promote regular habits.

"Minus meals" frequently cause common constipation due to insufficient "bulk" in the diet. Headaches, loss of appetite and dull, spiritless days too often follow.

Correct the "minus meal" by serving Kellogg's All-Bran regularly. Its gentle "bulk" does not break down in the body as much as the fiber in fruits and vegetables. So it is more effective. All-Bran also supplies vitamin B and iron.

Certainly it is safer to use this natural food in place of patent medicines. Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. Chronic cases, with each meal. If relief is not obtained, see your doctor.

All-Bran remains effective with continued use. Serve as a cereal with milk or cream, or cook into muffins, breads, waffles, etc. Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Three Essential Creams

New Aids Come in One Jar

By JULIET SHELBY

YOUR skin can look its loveliest at this time of the year, if you give it intelligent external care.

Don't sit wishing for a beautiful complexion; get busy and do something about that skin which is showing the ravages of a long and busy Winter.

After a thorough cleansing, proper lubrication is perhaps the most important consideration in the care of the skin. So many women with dry and tender skin find it difficult to keep the texture smooth and transparent. Sometimes a small hard red rash, resembling prickly heat, is nothing more than a very dry skin calling for help. A few days of cream cleansing and nourishing will soon make it soft and lovely again.

Dolores Del Rio has a gorgeous skin—dark, rich, and without a blemish—and she is a fervent devotee of skin oils. Her skin, lubricated daily by massage, is cleansed and nourished at night by creams. She believes strongly in long sun baths, providing one replenishes the oils that are baked out by the sun.

Very dry skin usually requires more than one cream, in fact, for proper lubrication and protection, these conditions often call for three creams. So it delights me to tell you about the cosmetic innovation that has just reached your counter.

This is a large jar which contains three essential creams—a vegetable oil cleansing cream, a rich penetrating nourishing cream, which, by the way, is excellent for wrinkles, and a delicate finishing foundation for makeup which also serves as a protection against the elements.

So with such a supply of cream nestled in your dressing table drawer or packed in your weekend bag, there is no reason why you cannot keep your skin ravishingly fresh and beautiful. And, incidentally, the jar retails at a surprisingly low price.

To learn the name of this new jar of three creams, and where they are sold, phone Miss Shelby, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, Boston, enclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope.

For economical transportation get a good reconditioned car. Read the excellent values listed in the Automobile-For-Sale columns of today's paper.

Question—Do you approve of using the white of an egg on the face? I have been told that eggs make a good astringent pack, but would first like to get your advice. If you think that they are beneficial, please tell me how to apply?

Carole D., Lawrence.

Answer—White of an egg makes an excellent astringent pack. It is useful for treatment of a skin that has gone crinkly and for tissues that are on the sag. Beat the egg white a few flips with a fork, just enough to make it the right consistency for spreading. Put it on with a silver table knife or the fingers. When the first layer dries, slap on another one. Let it remain until the face feels drawn. Remove with tepid water, dry the skin and deluge in a five-minute tapping with your favorite massage cream.

Hester Angers Kin

CHAPTER 20

(This is a serialization of the Cosmopolitan production soon to be released by Warner Bros.)

"Hester, you'll catch your death of cold. Into bed this minute."

She lay again in her warm bed, watching Stephen pull off his great boots.

"My, it's good to get home. What have you been doing, Hester?"

"Nothing much. What have you? You look so, so . . . I can't explain it." She remembered his look in that moment she had caught him off-guard the night of the carnival. Well, certainly not as if you'd ever lived in New York — kind of stripped of city sleekness, kind of rubbed down like a nice clean blade."

"Hester, you're funny. You've got such an imagination. You look awfully cared-for. You're the sleek one. Like a kitten that has been stroked the right way."

"Oh, Stephen," said Hester, reproachfully.

Thus their spirits, moving a moment before with such intensity on such different planes, sought to regain each other.

* * *

Hester went about her house filled with the vitalizing presence of Stephen. But there was more than the presence of Stephen changing the atmosphere of her home. There was Kin.

At night after he had brought the coffee, he stood by his master's chair ignoring her, telling Stephen the transactions of the day. This was the relationship of servant to master when the servant's personality took on dignity.

Hester felt herself shut out. Only now and then did she catch a Chinese word that she understood, and the long-flowing incomprehensible conversations annoyed her.

"What does he say?"

Who's the Master?

"I can't seem to tell you." Stephen was listening intently to Kin. Although he had talked the language for several years, he still had to give careful attention in order to understand.

"Don't you know what he's saying?"

"Yes, I know in Chinese but it's not easy to translate."

Hester felt hurt. Stephen did not want to let her into the discussion. She did not comprehend that he was thinking in Chinese, and the English words were not ready to his mind.

Kin waited patiently for his opportunity to go on.

"Why do you let him take up our evenings like this?" she demanded one night. "It seems to me it's out of place in a servant."

Stephen looked troubled. "I can't explain. I don't know. He does it on the road and somehow I can't put it in words—but Kin thinks it's the proper thing. And I've learned when the Chinese expect a thing, that you get along better if you yield to their standard."

Hester looked at her husband curiously. Was Kin the master, or Stephen, or Stephen the master of Kin? She felt uneasy. They were terribly in Kin's hands. Was he good?

Today, a week after Stephen's return, at the third ring of her bell, Kin appeared before her to take accounts. He was without his long robe of respect.

Stephen had said Kin must never appear before her like that.

After she had sent him for the gown, she sat nervously drumming on the desk, looking out at the frozen garden, watching the dry stalks of last season's sunflowers blowing disconsolately in the wind.

When Kin returned she must challenge every item of expense—Stephen had said the bills must come down. His salary would not stand it.

Hester Is Angry

Again Kin stood before her, now clad in correct long blue gown, looking very neat with his queue wound around his head. Hester felt somehow, in the presence of this middle-aged servant ridiculous in her youth.

"We could not eat two dozen bananas in three days."

Kin waited. No word passed his lips. At last, Hester entered in the book the two dozen bananas. Kin passed on to the next item. Coffee, a pound in two days. Stephen drank a great deal she knew, but surely not that much.

"I shall not pay it."

Still, without change of expression, Kin waited. Hester nervously entered the amount, went on to the next and the next item until the accounts were finished. Kin closed his book.

"Coal." He spoke but the one word, disdaining to explain why twice as much coal had been used since his return as before.

Hester felt angrier than she had ever been in her life. How dared he demand coal so soon?

She jumped up, knocking over a vase on the desk, caring not at all, and flew down the passageway to the kitchen. Kin righted the vase, then quietly followed. In the kitchen sat the cook, idle, the fire out.

"Why are you not getting the master's tiffin?" demanded Hester in a shrill voice.

The cook motioned toward the empty coal-box. Tears struggled in Hester's eyes. She felt a burst of fireworks in her brain as red-hot primitive anger flamed within her. She heard herself shouting, glad that she was shouting, as she pounded the table until the dishes rattled.

Kin stood in the door, the cook sat at the table. Neither moved, neither gave the slightest indication that they heard her outburst.

Suddenly, Hester's anger collapsed in humiliation. She threw down the coal money and fled to her room.

All at once she felt herself tired. Her muscles ached as if she had been in physical combat. She lay face down on her bed, dropping off to sleep, only to be roused again by her anger—futile anger, impotent before some not-understood strength.

She burst into tears. Thus Stephen found her on his return at noon.

"You mustn't let Kin win over you like this. I'll talk to him. My salary won't stand it," he told her, sitting beside her on the bed.

He summoned Kin to the living-room, sitting where Hester had sat that morning to talk to him. The servant's face was stony.

"Prior Born," he spoke in the measured phrases of his own language, "it is necessary to leave the honorable one. The lady's custom is not good. She pounds upon the table."

"But I pound on the table when you are wrong, Stephen exclaimed in astonishment, "and you have never threatened to leave me!"

"It is different," replied Kin.

A Blouse For Summer

By PRUNELLA WOOD

BLOUSES, usually a spring necessity, are running right into the dog-days this year, keeping up with the popular fancy for coat and skirt ensembles for all daytime purposes.

* * *

MANY linen suits, in rich colors such as beetroot and pomegranate, as well as in the perennial white, are to be worn. Organdie, washable silk and novelty club-striped taffetas are good with them. For sports wear and crash suits, shirting blouses such as we wore with tweeds will be popular, and with taffeta or other dressy silk suits very delicate sheer models in silk or cotton will be the choice.

* * *

SHORT sleeves are the mark of the real summer blouse, but plenty of over-blouses are to be had, though tuck-ins seem more casual.

Three blouses below are: Left, a self-patterned organdie; center, a pastel flat crepe; right a sheer with a jabot. The striped blouse below the trio is celanese taffeta in rose and purple.

White organdie with a self-pattern is used for the ruched Quaker maid blouse below.

The smart polka-dotted crepe blouse above comes in suit colors. The model above it is acetate crepe.

Mrs. Culbertson on Bridge

Seeking the Ninth Trick

Every declarer many times confronts the problem of gaining the ninth trick.

When the dummy goes down he can see eight and then he must answer the question: "What is the best method to pursue to fulfill the contract?"

That's the point in the hand below.

South, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

	♠6 ♡KQ753 ◇KQ862 ♣K7
♠K84 ♡1062 ◇A43 ♣J1093	North West East South	♠AJ53 ♡1984 ◇1095 ♣65
	♠Q10972 ♡A ◇J7 ♣A842

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♣	Pass	2♡	Pass
2♣	Pass	3◇	Pass
3NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened the Jack of clubs. It was at once apparent to declarer that he would have entry trouble.

The heart suit was already blocked, and blocks could easily develop in the minor suits. How was he to cash his top tricks?

The count of winners—if they could be cashed—was three hearts, two diamonds, and three clubs.

To make contract declarer would have to find a ninth trick, probably by way of a long card if the opponents did not oblige by leading spades and establishing a spade trick in the South hand.

Of course, if the opponents were in a position to cash three spade tricks at will, these tricks plus the diamond Ace would leave no leeway and would probably defeat the contract.

There was no use worrying about the spade situation, which was irrelevant to the plan of the hand, simply because declarer was powerless to alter the luck of the deal.

To win nine tricks in the remaining three suits declarer would have to establish one of them entire.

The heart suit was at once ruled out, the choice being therefore between diamonds and clubs.

Because of entry trouble and lack of top spades, declarer would probably have to find the outstanding cards in one of the two minors split evenly so that he could either run down the clubs solid or establish the diamond suit with only one loss.

The campaign dictated by this analysis was to play for both minor suits in the hope that one would break.

North won the opening lead with the club King and led the seven of clubs to the Ace.

Had either opponent shown out on this second lead, declarer would have abandoned the suit. As it was, he cashed the Queen of clubs, discarding the three of hearts from dummy.

East discarded the three of spades.

Having set up a club trick in the West hand, declarer decided he might as well use the card for a throw-in and put the burden of play upon West.

South therefore cashed the heart Ace and led a fourth round of clubs, North discarding the deuce of diamonds.

The temptation was strong, of course, to preserve the heart Ace for re-entry to South's long club, but declarer thought that this play would be too risky, as the remaining heart tricks might never come in.

West, stuck in the lead with a club, could find no better exit than a heart. Dummy won, South discarding a spade.

Declarer was now none too happy. He led a small diamond from dummy and was dismayed when the Jack lost to West's Ace.

But the diamond split and the location of the spade Jack made it impossible for the defense to save game, since declarer threatened to win three tricks in each suit on either side of spades.

West could do no good by letting the diamond Jack hold. South would, of course, cash the long club, discarding dummy's small heart, and the ensuing diamond lead would put West up against it.

Mrs. Culbertson will be very glad to answer questions on bridge. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope, and address your questions to Josephine Culbertson, in care of this newspaper.

LOVE SHOULD Disregard PERSONAL Comfort

By MARGUERITE MOORS MARSHALL

"Wanted: Pioneer Wives."

It's the scan, invisible, but immensely important, which Dame Nature hangs out over her own "employment bureau" in the mating season—the Spring of 1935.

What [illegible] dame wants for [illegible] wooing must [illegible] ideal time for adventuring in a new world of wifehood. They must be willing to step with heads high and proud from the limousine level to the subway-street-car stratum. They must forego the comforts of a father's home for the comradeship of a husband's—and they must not come crawling back to father with a husband on their arm for father to support.

POOR FOR AWHILE

Perhaps not since covered wagon days have the times demanded such pioneering of American girls as during the last few years. Most young women who marry definitely must make up their minds to go into the economic wilderness away from what they have come to regard as the American standard of living, to be poor for awhile. And for heaven's sake, what of it, while one's young?

Kathleen Norris in May Cosmopolitan Magazine has a superb short story dramatizing this mistaken course of maidenhood. She calls it "To the Ends of the Earth" and it is the tale of Amanda, who would not marry because she was "too happy to make any change."

Amanda lived on a California ranch, such as Mrs. Norris' own—a little heaven-on-earth of grapevines, flags, "plush" puppies, swimming pool, croquet ground, open-air grill, hospitality pressed down and running over. In a big, jolly, clever, affluent family.

The man who loved her and whom she loved, asked her to go into Mexican exile for five years. He said:

"I don't say I'd make you happy, Amanda. I'd try like hell. I don't say you'd have children—but you might. It'd be your life, anyway . . .

FULL-SIZED JOB

"My wife can't just stick me in with all the rest—one more interest and one more care. With us it'll have to be everything—my living for her, and her living for me, and nobody else' She'll have to be willing to change, mentally, physically, to put herself into this marriage for all she's worth. It's a full-sized job, the way I see it—getting married."

How Amanda also comes to see it, to see that "we women have to give life up to keep it." We can't hold the line without paying. We have to give up—to get it back. We have to earn it — this is Mrs. Norris' splendid story, which you must read for yourselves in Cosmopolitan Magazine.

Canned Goods Tips

From Martha Lee's Friday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

This week at our cooking school, Miss Marjorie Black talked on the labeling of canned goods. This is a subject we are hearing much about these days.

There is a concerted effort on the part of manufacturers to make it necessary to have clear and simple information on the label of canned goods.

A good idea, we all agree, and a step forward to the time when, in picking up a can of fruit or vegetables, we can see how many pieces of fruit or how many cups of vegetables it contains, how tender the products, the size, and the sweetness of the syrup.

All these are points women have been asking about for such a long time.

We take our buying more seriously and regard the packaged food with greater appreciation than in the past.

Miss Black spoke of a few important points that have troubled homemakers. The question of leaving foods in tins—it is perfectly sanitary and healthful. The inside of the can is treated so that it is germ proof.

The liquid in the can should be used. If on a vegetable, cook the vegetable down in this until the liquid is absorbed. If on a fruit drain and use for fruit punches.

NATIVE ASPARAGUS

The third important point was about retaining minerals, salts and vitamins. Because these foods are packaged in an absence of oxygen, it is this element that destroys vitamin content.

At the present time, however, let's turn to the markets that are overflowing with fresh fruits and vegetables.

Much native produce is being sold at this time—the item of main interest being asparagus. A bunch of native asparagus, smaller in size than the Californian, sells for 19c. The large southern sells for 35c to 39c and some Hudson River sells for 50c. It is rather difficult to choose vegetables this week end because there are so many fine ones. New cabbage is 5c a pound, beets and carrots 5c to 7c a pound, dandelions and spinach sell at about the same price—5 pounds for 10c. The spinach is mostly native; dandelions are getting to the end of the season.

Tomatoes sell for 10c to 32c a pound. Yellow turnips for 2c to 3c. There are all kinds of salad ingredients — and both iceberg and native hot-house lettuce around 10c, native cucumbers 7c to 15c, radishes which add a glorious touch of color 5c or 6c a bunch, and celery 12c to 20c a bunch. Bermuda onions are selling for 7c to 10c a pound.

MEATS EXPENSIVE

Native rhubarb, which is so delicious at the present time, sells at the very low price of 4c to 6c a pound. In cooking rhubarb it needs no extra water added. Simply wash the rhubarb, leaving on all the tender pink skin, dice, add sugar and cook about 5 minutes.

The rhubarb may be covered for the first few minutes to steam. Strawberries are also selling at the same low price—a pint basket for 12c to 15c.

Meats are still expensive, lamb being the ideal choice among them. There is plenty of fresh spring lamb available. Good lamb should be of dull pink color with hard, creamy fat and a pink cast of the bones. A large amount of fat assures it of being juicy.

Spring lamb is usually tender, because it is young meat. No matter what cut you purchase it can be cooked in a variety of ways. Not only may the leg be roasted, but the shoulder, breast and loin end. Also some of the choice cuts such as the breast, neck and shoulder make a delicious stew, or you might want a curry of lamb.

For Plumper Figures

By Annice Brink

DESPITE wondrous suits, liquid diets and exercises, some figures refuse to go sylph. But even the most stubborn case can achieve the effect of good lines with properly fitted foundation garments and clothes which provide the utmost in flattery. Here is a sheer navy-blue voile, polka dotted in white, which has artful fullness under the arms, smoothly-fitted skirt, a two-way jabot which may be worn high-fastened or low, and sleeve-interest that shows off a nice wrist. Navy, black and brown are favorites, with white dots, and sizes go up to 46, with the price 'way down near four dollars. For details, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LIBerty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American.

Fashion Flashes

EVENING GOWNS of silk lace are the most important manifestation of the revival of laces. They are handled like fine chiffons or silk crepes, with full hemlines, and softened decolletages featuring dropped shoulder effects, shoulder ruffles and draped treatments. However, there are some new dinner gowns in silk lace which while they are soft in silhouette have amusing tailored touches, such as shirtwaist bodices, little round or pointed collars, and front closings accented with vertical ruchings.

FLOYD GIBBONS' PAGE OF THRILLS AND MYSTERY

"Death in the River"

Man Carried Close to Ghastly Doom by Criminal He Sought to Capture.

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO, EVERYBODY!

Ever get stuck with a rubber check? Well, sir, that is an adventure in itself—and not a very pleasant one either. But here's a case where a bad check led from one thing to another, and finally wound up with that blood-curdling experience that H. Eugene Percifield, of 45 Adams street, Sea Cliff, N. Y., had with a vicious criminal on the Halifax river at Daytona, Florida.

FLOYD GIBBONS

Gene Percifield's dad ran an automobile agency in Lake Worth, Florida, back in 1923, and it was there that the curious chain of events started that was to lead to the most terrifying 10 minutes of Gene's life. A stranger came to the agency one day, brought a new car, and paid for it with a check.

Before the man drove away, Gene saw him transfer two pistols from his pockets to the pockets of the newly purchased car, but he thought nothing of it at the moment. It was only when the stranger's check was returned marked "No Funds" that Gene realized what sort of man his dad had been dealing with.

The crook was gone—and so was the car. Gene's dad notified the police and let it go at that. Gene never expected to see the bird again, but a couple days after the check was returned, he ran across him—in a manner that makes him shiver every time he thinks of it.

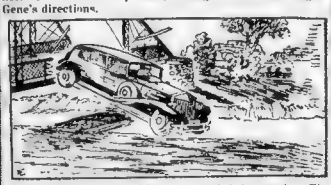
Gene and two other young lads his own age had gone to Jacksonville to drive three new cars down for his dad. They were on their way back, about 25 miles north of Daytona, when Gene spied a new sedan parked at a filling station, and saw a man standing beside it who looked like the crook who had passed the bad check on his dad.

Gene stopped the other two cars—told the lads who were driving them what he had seen. They drove their buses back to the filling station, parked them, one in back, one in front and one alongside of the crook's car, completely hemming him in.

Gene climbed out of his car and started for the crook. It was then—and only then—that he remembered the guns—the two pistols the man had been carrying when he bought the car from his dad a few days before.

Gene's eye cast wildly about in search of some sort of weapon. There wasn't a thing in sight. Then, his knees shaking, his tongue dry against the roof of his mouth, he thrust his hand inside his coat, pretending he had a gun there, and faced the crook.

The crook took it quietly enough. He didn't even make any protest when Gene told him he was going to take him in to Daytona and turn him over to the police. There was a woman with the crook, and Gene got in the back seat with her. The crook sat up front, driving the car according to Gene's directions.



It was about nine o'clock of a cool, balmy night. The car bowled along at a fast clip, and was rapidly nearing Daytona. The crook had taken his capture so meekly—was following directions so obediently that Gene was lulled into a false sense of security.

He was beginning to think that things weren't going to be so bad after all. But later—just a few moments later—he was going to change his mind about that.

They were coming into Daytona when things began to happen. There, the crook failed for the first time to follow directions and turned onto a bridge that led over the Halifax river. Gene told him to stop or he'd knock his block off, but he might as well have been talking to a post. The man stepped on the gas and drove on.

They were about the middle of the bridge now. The woman, in the back seat with Gene, began to get panicky. She called to the crook to stop or she'd jump out of the car. The crook said, "Oh, you will, eh?" AND DROVE THE CAR THROUGH THE BRIDGE RAILING INTO THE RIVER.

The car turned turtle as it hit the river, and sank in five feet of water. Gene landed in a stooped position, his feet on the inverted top of the car. The water rose to his knees—his chest—HIS NECK.

And still it was coming up. He cursed—prayed—tried to break a window. Then he took one last deep breath as the water covered him over.

A seat cushion was on his back, pushing him down. He thrust it aside and managed to get his nose above water in a narrow space between the water and the up-ended floor of the car. Then he felt something kick him under water—the woman—struggling in her death throes at the bottom of the car.

Gene grabbed her and tried to pull her head up into that narrow pocket of air at the top of the car. She slipped out of his arms and sank down again. Gene went down after her and found—an opening—a broken window beneath the surface of the water. He dived—felt someone grab him from outside, and was pulled out, a piece of broken glass cutting a deep gash in his back as he went.

As he came up, he saw a straw hat floating on the surface of the water. A crowd of people lined the bridge rail. Two men who were fishing nearby had jumped in to help the occupants of the wrecked car.

They pulled out the woman—extricated the crook, who was standing on his head in the water, trying to drown himself. They turned him over to police on the bridge, and Gene went back to find his two pals and the three cars they were driving down from Jacksonville.

THREE INJURED, 9 CHILDREN SAVED IN FIRE

Three persons were injured, but nine children were dropped to safety by their parents today during a two-alarm fire which swept the three-story brick building at 23 Sullivan street, Charlestown.

One mother, Mrs. Ellen Connolly, who herself had jumped from the second floor, caught in her arms her five sons and daughters as her husband, Michael Connolly, dropped the children from a window.

Another mother, Mrs. Eva Lewey, a widow, dropped her four children from a first floor window in the yard and then followed them.

Leo Francis, 26, of 8 Salem street, Charlestown, who discovered the $10,000 fire raging and who sounded the alarm, was injured when he tripped in the alley while running back to help the occupants.

Frank J. Benford of Beaver street, Charlestown, attached to Engine 27, suffered lacerations of hands from falling glass.

Trapped by fire mushrooming up through a three-story apartment house in Sullivan street, Charlestown, today, Mrs. Eva Lewey, first floor occupant, lowered eight-year-old Shirley Lewey and six-year-old Robert Lewey from a rear window, then leaped to the ground herself sustaining minor injuries.

CORNELIUS DANIEL MARGARET JOSEPH

Police and fire department investigators suspect that a blaze which drove these children from their home in Sullivan street, Charlestown, today may have been incendiary. In the group are Cornelius, Daniel, Margaret and Joseph Connoll, children of Mr. and Mrs. Connoll, third floor tenants. (Pictures by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

WOMAN SAVED IN EVERETT FIRE

Misdirection of fire apparatus today nearly cost the life of Mrs. William Hershone, wife of a Chelsea paper box manufacturer, when flames swept her $10,000 home in Everett.

Alone in the house at 21 Reynolds avenue, she was unconscious in bed from smoke when engines, directed to a different section of the city through a telephone alarm misunderstanding, reached the scene.

Firemen Charles Hill and John Moriarty carried her to safety over a ladder. Her name was placed on the danger list at Whidden Hospital.

Damage was $2000.

'MIRACLE' VISION In Church Belfrey

Middletown, Ct., May 17 (AP).—Residents are still talking today about the white, shadowy figure which stood in the arch of the belfrey at St. Sebastian's Catholic Church and which many said was that of the Blessed Virgin.

Priests said the apparition was difficult of explanation. It attracted an estimated 4000 persons, hundreds of whom stood for hours after midnight, when reports of the figure spread.

Searchlights were played on the figure, which seemed to melt away to re-appear when the lights were turned off.

Newburyport, May 17.—An indictment charging second degree murder was returned today against Mrs. Grace Seward, 33, of Liberty street, Lynn.

Mrs. Seward is held in Salem jail charged with the murder of Leon Brown, 51-year-old Lynn leather worker, on April 13. Brown was stabbed to death with a butcher knife in the kitchen of his apartment.

The slaying took place in Brown's School street home, where he had lived with his 81-year-old father, Clarence Brown. The aged man slept through it all.

According to police, the dead man's pockets were turned inside-out. Mrs. Seward, they said, had $5.50 in one pocket of her coat and $15.20 in another.

According to police, a party had been in progress before the murder. Mrs. Seward figured prominently in the Swampscott "rum ring" proceedings of 1924.

City Water Too Costly For Shrimp

Evolution of an evening meal

Stunned by a $40 30-day water bill, a Somerville home owner today appealed to Mayor James E. Hagan and Water Commissioner Joseph L. Phillips to find a leak on his property.

They found no leak but in the bathtub of the second floor apartment, occupied by a tenant who is also an angler, they found several gallons of live shrimp being kept in good health by a continual flow of water.

The shrimp was soon converted into a salad.

AUSTEN LAKE on Reveries

On the Proposed State Lottery

SOME OF OUR BEACON HILL statesmen are trying to crowd a lottery measure down the public gullet, much as a French pate maker stuffs corn into a goose for the sake of enlarging its liver.

This, of course, makes the goose very sick so that it is pleased to flop down and die. But it enriches the sponsors.

Austen Lake

The statesmen move on the theory that the people, having some loose cash and being pretty simple, will gamble, lawfully or otherwise, and have been taking a brutal tossing around by the nigger pool, sweepstakes and pool hall brokers.

They argue that the people quenched their thirst, during prohibition, when deprived of nourishing beverages, by swallowing sheep dip, brass polish and the coarse stimulants that were smuggled in under darkness and sold for $1 a sip, nip and sniff.

And they say, if the public wishes to have its spare cash soaked up, the state is in position to do the job more mercifully and with less pain than the slinky characters and human weasels who are now doing it.

Because now, the statesmen say, only a small part of this elicit gambling money ever comes back to the investors, whereas the state would merely skim the top off the kitty, and share what was left.

Boston Runs High Gambling Fever

THE POLICE ARE QUICK to scatter a sidewalk crap game as a depraving influence on the young, and sometimes tap a juvenile sportsman over the noggin with a night stick or hawl him off to a steel cage.

But at the cost of a little sleep, some money and a trifle of remorse, any night prowler can lead you to houses of chance in the best and worst parts of the city, where, under a mysterious indulgence, the freckled dice cubes and the spirited white ball will give his money a sweat.

The churches and fraternal clubs have been quick to cater to the people's gambling mania, by setting up "Beano," "Bingo," "Stage" games, which are different names for the same thing, and offering expensive prizes.

And, through the enterprise of a promoter who sees things with big eyes, the Boston Arena housed 2000 people last Friday, who squatted around tables and tried for the Grand Premium, which was a motor car, and a dozen other prizes, like electric refrigerators, concert pianos and radios.

This, for the sake of civic conscience, was labelled "a game of skill, not a game of chance."

Six Phonies to One Honest Ticket

BEFORE HE JUMPED OFF the political tailboard, ex-Governor Joe Ely estimated that illicit gambling cost the people of his state $260,000,000 a year, which was blowing up the true facts.

But the sum is huge and the annual amount sunk in the Irish and Canadian Sweeps is computed at $10,000,000 in Boston alone, hardly a sixth of which reaches the proper charities in Montreal and Dublin.

I have written before how the proportion of Sweeps tickets to six phonies to one genuine, with the counterfeiting growing swiftly in late years.

In many cases the agents who peddle the fakes are innocent of the fraud, believing they are working for credited concerns and turning back their collections faithfully.

Only too late, when the stubs fail to check back, do they discover the cheat.

I know of one man who refunded every dollar to his clients out of his own pocket, his simple faith in a chiseling employer costing him $278.

Due to benevolent winking by the authorities, who suffer the Sweeps sale for the sake of the fairy tale dreams it brings to the poor and aged as well as the rich and young, the counterfeiters have operated safely behind a screen of sentiment.

Since it is unlawful to distribute Sweeps tickets of any sort, the thieves have operated on the same plane of indulgence as the honest agents.

Nevada Is Candid — ETOA N

THE ONLY STATE IN the Union that legally allows indoor gambling on tables is Nevada, which has always been a little more candid about its sins, and thus a little more honorable in them than the rest of the communities, which pretend to ignore their iniquities.

But table gambling, with the frisky dice blocks, the bowl and pingpong ball, and the dealing of colored pasteboards, goes on quite frankly in this city behind shuttered and steel doored dwellings.

I have known some of these operators as pleasant persons, religious, sober and gentle with their families.

As a commercial set they bear an unfortunate character, though in my acquaintance I am aware of a social preference for them over some folk who make loud protestations of virtue while vacuuming up the savings of simple people in legalized frauds.

* * *

Fun to Be a Sucker

I HAVE HEARD Colonel Bradley, the Kentucky horse breeder who operates a gambling palace at Palm Beach, warn his customers that his games could not be beaten and that they were fools to try to lick the house percentages which, slowly but certainly, would dry them up.

This always seemed to have the same effect on the patrons as the advertisements during prohibition which warned purchasers of the little raisin bricks not to put the dry product in a gallon of luke-warm water, slightly seasoned with yeast.

And if they did, not to stir the mixture every ten minutes, lest it brew a wine beyond legal alcoholic strength.

I have found that if you warn the masses against a certain sporting event as a tricksy fake, they will batter down the walls to get a look. So I have long ceased to sound crusades for, or against, anything.

It is more fun to be a sucker, with all the simple, trusting faith that the word implies, than to go about spraying the landscape with virtue.

And if the Beacon Hill statesmen enlarge the public liver with a richer gambling diet, I will be pleased to ring out part of my roll for the state lottery tickets, just as I have shed futile dollars annually for those pretty Sweeps engravings, most of which have been fakes.

Identify to Start In Granite State

WINNER OF TOBOGGAN, OUTLEGGING DISCOVERY

By Walter Kiley

Rockingham Park, N. H., May 17—Among the earliest arrivals here this morning was Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's Identify, son of Man o' War, surprise winner of the Old Toboggan Handicap at Belmont Park, Wednesday.

Accompanied by his trainer, Bud Stotler, Identify was brought on here for the Granite State Handicap, tomorrow's stake feature, which carries with it a purse of $5000 added.

Last fall Identify was taken out of a claiming race for $3500. Then came a fine campaign through the Maryland circuit, topped off by his winning the Belmont effort when he finished off his great stablemate, Discovery, among others.

Man o' War's offspring added $4225 to his earnings by his Old Toboggan victory. His victims included Mrs John Hay Whitney's Singing Wood, Belmont Futurity winner of the past.

In tomorrow's Granite State race of a mile and one-sixteenth, Identify will in all probability be rated the public's favorite. He will be coupled as a Vanderbilt stable entry with Dynasia, which finished second to Lady Fly, a 20-1 shot, in the opening day Speed Handicap at Rockingham.

LONG SHOTS

Being favorite means little according to the manner in which the horses have been running here.

Out of 16 races, the public's choice came through only once. That was on C. V. Whitney's Synod, which walked off with top honors in the fourth on Wednesday.

He paid off at the rate of $3.70 to 1, or $540 on a $2 investment.

The form players suffered one nightmare after another as the result of the second day program. One long shot after another, right down through the list of races, paraded home to reward their backers handsomely.

Carrioon came through to pay $42.50 in the second. Mild paid $8.20 in the fourth, Yap returned $8.20 in the sixth and Stepbrother was good for $41.20 in the finale.

FLEMING SMART

Veteran horsemen pin the blame on the lack of recent workouts and the long overland jaunts by train in which some of the thoroughbreds travelled from California and other distant spots, standing as long as four and five days en route.

They point to Bill Fleming's Gentle Knight, winner of the fifth race the Concord Claiming Handicap as proof of their contention.

The former trotting horse owner and trainer has had his stable of 12 horses at Rockingham for close to two weeks, in which time they have had a chance to become acclimated.

Zachary Wins Long Duel

Pittsburgh, May 17 (US) A timely single by Jimmy Bucher in the 13th inning helped the Brooklyn Dodgers open their western invasion with a 2-0 shutout victory over the Pirates.

Bucher's game-swagger scored Rordagaray, and Danny Taylor followed with a long fly tallying Frey to break up a pitching duel between the left-handed Tom Zachary and Waite Hoyt.

Ruth to Ask Retirement Unless He Snaps Out of It

St. Louis, Mo., May 17—Babe Ruth was to be in left field today as the Braves opened with the Cards, but the big boy made no bones about the fact that he would ask to be put on the voluntary retired list unless he does a whole lot better than he has been doing of late.

Babe is batting for only .171, and his fielding has been rancid. Warm weather may help, but it is doubtful. The Bam has reached the end of his rope. And he knows it.

Today's pitchers were to be Brandt for the Braves and Haid-han for the home side.

Cude Captain

Harold E. Cude of Manchester, Conn., has been elected captain of the Tech freshman track team.

CHISOX Visit FENS

SURPRISE TEAM OF SEASON

By Joe Cashman

Our third-place Red Sox aren't doing any cheering over being back at the Fens today to begin their first long home stay of the season in the opener of a three-game series with Chicago's league-leading White Sox.

The Cronimen are from Missouri as far as their own back yard is concerned. In other words, they must be shown that it's to their advantage to be playing on Jersey street before they do any cap tossing.

That attitude is unique, yet quite natural in this instance.

For to date, the Sox have maintained championship pace on the road in contrast to a sub-cellar gait of .200 at home.

To be more specific they have won 11 victories in 16 starts on the trails and can point to but five efforts at the Yankee Yard.

Also on these home defeats they have met with 16 of the 21 errors charged against them thus far in the campaign.

A new diamond once remodeled, they have had something to do with. Off their own more than that wrong is Manager Joe Cronin admitted today.

"We had the slump coming to us," Pilot Joe chirped.

"We had won six of our first seven starts and had gone through half a dozen games without making an error.

"We were defying every law of average and were bound to be called upon to pay sooner or later. Unfortunately payment was demanded while we were making our home bow.

"It will be different this time. We're back to normal and will stay there."

"We have yet to show New England fans winning ball, but I promise we will for the remainder of the season."

HOW COME?

The White Sox, according to the standings, are the strongest of the clubs who'll take part in this annual Western invasion of the Hub, but the Cronimen find this hard to believe.

For their tour of the wide open spaces the pales ended a 10-game win streak of the Dykes Domine by taking two out of three in Chicago while they had to be satisfied with even breaks in two-game engagements at Cleveland and St. Louis and a defeat in the only contest staged at Detroit.

The Pale Hose, basement occupants last year and expected to be again this season, have never been lower than second and have been out front most of the time this year.

Their startling reversal of form can be traced to the assimilation of Pitcher John Whitehead from Dallas who has won five games in as many starts, and Vernon Washington and Ray Radcliffe, slugging outfielders from the American Association.

BOSTON Fans Loyal TO BABE

CRONIN FETED ON MONDAY

By Joe Cashman

Babe Ruth may be telling the truth when he says he intends to quit after the Braves current Western tour but he's talking through his hat if he alleges Boston fans haven't done right by him.

This envoy has attended every game at the Wigwam this year and never once did he hear any word or sound of censure of the Babe. Whenever the big fellow performed a most ordinary feat he was cheered to the echo and his every failure at bat and afield was followed by chivalrous sympathetic silence in the stands.

Whether Ruth gets through with his plans to retire as an active player in two weeks depends on how he fares in competition in the West. He's a creature of moods. At the moment he is discouraged over his weak hitting and doubtless is determined to quit. Let him have a good road trip, though, and in all probability he will return talking about playing 100 games and hitting 40 homers this season.

Governor Louis Brann will head a party of 20 Maine sportsmen to the Joe Cronin friendship dinner at the Copley Plaza next Monday evening. Included in the group will be Bill Corrigan, former Red Sox manager, who is one of Fitz's Joe's warmest admirers.

Cronin will no sooner have that meal digested before he'll be sitting at the feed we heard at the Temple Israel Brotherhood on Longwood avenue. Coach Al Schacht will be the guest speaker at this affair, which is listed for next Thursday evening.

"Babe" Dahlgren, Sox kid first baseker, deserves a big hand on his return to the Fens today. He might well have become discouraged over his weak hitting in early games. Instead he stayed in there swinging, and is now rated as one of the most dangerous hitters [illegible] than in the minors ex[illegible] as a result of basing [illegible] the "jumps" [illegible] as good home runs in two days [illegible] accidentally, he's [illegible] Chicago series.

John "Sphinx" Whitehead, rookie mound marvel of the White Sox, has good cause to remember Dahlgren. The big Texan would have had a no-hit game against the Cruninmen but for a home run and double by "Babe."

Whitehead [illegible] when it comes to talking, says his body ever helped him develop as a pitcher. His best ball is a sidearm "sinker" but he has [illegible] He stands two inches over six feet tall, weighs 210 and is 25 years old. He pitched for Dallas the past three years and last season won 20 and lost 9. He's won five games [illegible] many starts in the majors. Says he finds it little different in [illegible] ball of Cleveland.

Old Tom Zachary, who would look pretty sweet in a Braves uniform right now, hurled 12 scoreless innings against the Pirates as the Dodgers beat Waite Hoyt 2 to 0 in the only National League game played yesterday. The victory enabled the Flatbush crew to hold second place over the Cubs. Earler in the race, Zachary blanked the Bucs for eight frames, only to be beaten in the ninth.

Boston's own Vic Tamulis came through with a shutout as the Yankees walloped the Indians, 10 to 0. The win put the McCarthymen in a virtual tie with the Red Sox for third place, 1½ games back of Cleveland.

Cavalcade Rounding Into Form

By Associated Press

Miss Dodge Sloane's Cavalcade is fast rounding into racing condition and may be seen under the silks before the Suburban Handicap at Belmont Park for which he is being pointed. He apparently has fully recovered from a recent foot ailment and during one of his recent workouts ran a mile and a furlong in 1 53. The Brookemeads stable announced the signing of Jockey Johnny Gilbert, who probably will pilot the big horse in the Suburban Handicap.

The "Australian gate" has a staunch supporter in Joseph E. Widener. This method was tried for a brief period at Belmont Park and Widener deems it the best. "Breaking flat-footed from the stalls is very severe on the horses," he said. "That's why so many of 'em break down." On the other hand, Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons favors the stall gates.

Supporters of A. G. Vanderbilt's Discovery were not discouraged the other day when the crack handicap horse failed to gather any part of the purses in the six-furlong sprint of the Tobogan Handicap at Belmont Park. Discovery never was highly rated as a sprinter, but when he is sent over a longer distance he'll probably knock over all the opposition.

HUSKIES LEAVE For Springfield

Led by Capt. Roger Hadley and Ray Henderson, Husky trackmen leave Boston today for Springfield where they will meet the Gymnasts tomorrow in a dual contest.

Hadley scored three firsts against New Hampshire in the weight events, while Henderson captured two in the hurdles and one in the sprints.

Capt. Hadley is N. E. Intercollegiate discus champ, while Henderson is former schoolboy hurdles titleholder.

Another champion is Jim Sandler, who holds the New England high jump record made last year at Springfield at the Intercollegiates, but which he has surpassed several times this past season.

What the Stars Did

BILL DICKEY, Yankees—Led assault on Indians with triple, two doubles and single, driving in three runs.

TOM ZACHARY and FRENCHY BORDAGARAY, Dodgers—Zachary shut out Pirates in 13-inning game, Bordagaray made two hits, stole two bases and scored winning run.

TOMMY BRIDGES, Tigers—Limited Senators to six hits for 7-2 victory, fanning nine.

Sonny Signs With Balkin

By JACK CONWAY

SPEAKING of news: Gus Sonnenberg, former world heavyweight wrestling champion, has signed a five-year contract with Leon Balkin of New York.

Mr. Boston

"Balkin is one of the best managers in the country," said Gus today. "He will take care of my business, and I can devote all of my attention to wrestling."

Balkin will be in Sonnenberg's corner when he wrestles Dan O'Mahoney in a match, best two out of three, at the Garden tonight.

* * *

O'Mahoney will be back East only next week and will then put the finishing touches to his training for his meeting with Sonnenberg.

* * *

DOVE OF PEACE

BRUCE Wetmore and Steve Stevens of Suffolk Downs made a tour of inspection at Narragansett Park seeking new ideas. Walter O'Hara gave the Suffolk Downs officials 100 per cent co-operation which was additional proof that the race war in New England is over.

* * *

Mark Linenthal, Boston engineer who built Narragansett Park, is also the engineer at Suffolk Downs.

* * *

Horses are already arriving at Narragansett. The real drive will start in ten days.

* * *

An addition is being built to the clubhouse at Gansett. The extension is in the direction of the grandstand. There will be a bridge from the clubhouse to the grandstand.

* * *

CORUM ON RUTH

DESPITE denials, Bill Corum's story in the Boston Evening American that Babe Ruth is "finished" stands. The Babe told it to Corum.

It was Corum who had the first positive statement that Babe Ruth was coming to the Braves. That story was also denied at that time.

* * *

In I at Saturday's Boston Evening American, Austen Lake told of the passing of Ruth. The big fellow has lost the old spark. He may play a few more games. He may even go through the season. But as a great player he is through. The Babe knows this better than anybody else.

* * *

Ruth is still a box office attraction, and will draw well for the Braves on the present road trip. Especially in Pittsburgh and Cincinnati.

* * *

FORM PLAYERS

THE form players at Rockingham Park are picking their spots carefully. The first week at any track is a bad one for the form players. They prefer to wait until they find out which horses are in condition.

* * *

The long shot players have been having a field day at Rockingham. You will be interested to know that Dave Wilson will name the best long shot of the week in the Boston Sunday Advertiser. A brand new racing feature that sparkles.

* * *

Pass Wilson's Feed Box Special in the Rockingham Race Special of the Boston Evening American, was beaten by Stephentor, and took second money. Dave sends his Feed Box Special from the track each morning, and it appears only in the Rockingham Race Special.

* * *

Judge Bryan, racing secretary for Suffolk Downs, will be introduced to the sports writers by Bayard Tuckerman, Jr., at a luncheon at the Union Club on Sunday noon.

* * *

Frank Menke, able sports writer is in charge of the New York Garden's publicity forces at Madison Square Garden. Harry Park N. J. Menke for years was Jack Dempsey's ghost writer. He has also compiled many record books on athletics.

Ready in Two Years For State Tourney

Maxwell the Great

By Bill Grimes

Laudation of club professionals by greenskeepers is so general as to be in the category of the caption, "Dog Bites Child" . . . But anytime you hear a professional eulogizing a greenskeeper, there's a news story in the offing . . .

While I was at the Marshfield Country Club for the Central Southern team match Alex Bird the club professional climbed on the old soap box, sauded the condition of the course to the skies and wound up with a string of superlatives concerning M. D. Maxwell as a greenskeeper.

A few years ago, some up and coming members of the Marshfield Country Club decided that they must have an 18-hole layout. And, believe you me, they have one today.

Back in the days when it was a nine-hole course, Marshfield was noted for its wonderful greens, but today the putting surfaces are rated with the best in New England . . . Every green is uniform, true and keen . . . The putting surfaces have been responsible for the increasing popularity of the course . . .

SOIL SANDY

Marshfield has more than the usual quota of outstanding holes and its one shutters rank with the best . . . Three years ago, when the 18-hole unit was opened, the experts were loud in their praise of the layout and the greens but skeptical when queried on the length of time it would require to bring in the fairways.

Turf experts called attention to the lack of richness, so vital to the health of real fairways . . . There was no getting away from the fact that Marshfield was sandy, but where the experts erred was in the fact that they did not recognize or appreciate Maxwell's ability as a greenskeeper.

Maxwell has performed a miracle . . . Fertilizer, plenty of water and constant care have brought in the fairways to such an extent that the members and guests are now playing orthodox golf—playing them as they lie—on every hole . . .

Within two years Marshfield will be ready for a state championship and it will prove one of the best and fairest tests the title contenders have ever confronted . . .

19TH HOLE

Like all great greenskeepers Maxwell is willing to explain his system of grass cultivation to anyone interested in that subject . . . There's no magic wand waving on his part . . . Just a knowledge of grass and the Marshfield soil . . .

He believes that the greens are always in perfect condition because of the fact that at the end of each season he puts on a heavy layer of top dressing which protects them during the winter months . . .

Just as soon as the sun and rain start the grass growing in the spring the putting surfaces come in strong and healthy and ready for eight months of heavy traffic . . .

Also, there are other improvements at Marshfield this season. The locker room has been completely renovated and enlarged . . . Even to the extent of installing a 19th hole . . .

The lockers are all new, and the showers—four in number—are of the very latest type.

CLAIMS BAER IN POOR SHAPE

By Davis J. Walsh
International News Sports Editor

New York, May 17 — To me, it's beginning to sound like a conspiracy of nonsense. Nevertheless, it is fact, not fancy, that six authorities, whose combined boxing experience runs into several hundreds of years, are lined up today behind James J. Braddock, the heavyweight challenger, in preference to Max Baer, the champion.

It isn't so much that they like Braddock on the night of June 13; it's more that they're prepared not to like Baer. They think he'll beat himself.

One of them, surprisingly is Mr John Dempsey, who spoke on the radio Monday and blandly announced that he didn't think Baer could make a winning fight because of his condition

The others are Jack Kearns ex-manager of ex-Champion Dempsey, Joe Woodman, who managed Sam Langford; Tom O'Rourke who managed Dixon and Walcott and Dan Morgan and Dan McKetrick, who in their time managed everybody but themselves

KEARNS SET

Woodman and McKetrick each and very well might change their minds in the next three weeks but Kearns says, flatly, that is not his intent. He put it in writing in a letter to a friend here

As for Dempsey, he may be a some idle blather about some difference of fact or law having arisen between John and the Baer camp However, John is a pretty reasonable sort of a mind-changer in his own right and I recall, for that matter, that he issued some caustic remarks about Baer's condition before the Carnera fight last year.

HAND O. K.

But even supposing that Dempsey it not without ulterior inspiration in talking Baer down at this time and those other gents are leveling, too, the writer who has seen Baer's condition and kind of likes Baer is wondering a little wobbly whether the parties are being carried away by stories about Baer's bad right hand. It is bad, but, with care, it ought to come around within two weeks

If it doesn't, he and his camp will be crying if they don't file a plea on a postponement After all, it would be grotesque if to be if they blow the title for lack of money they figure to get this time and, besides, Braddock already beaten one man, Lasky, who thought he could go in the ring with one hand and a petition

Anybody, if the champion's sprained thumb heals in time I suspect that all this drivel about him being a set for two cents will do him more good than harm The more, in fact, they pick against Baer, the further off he's liable to win.

STELLA PREPARES FOR GRUDGE RACE

SEEKS REVENGE ON HELEN

By International News Service

Cleveland, May 17 — "Helen Stephens will know pretty soon who Stella Walsh is."

Stella Walsh herself was talking about the 17-year-old Fulton, Mo., girl runner who, after beating Cleveland's Olympic champion in the 50-meter race during the National A. A. U. indoor meet at St. Louis, dropped the remark—

RETORTS

"Who is Stella Walsh?"

Stella who has taken the spotlight the last few weeks with a pair of record-breaking performances to add to her list of 42 world, American, Canadian, Polish and Japanese records, made her retort to the Missouri girl's question to International News Service today.

She said she is unafraid of any girl runner, let alone an unknown who beat her in one race. They will meet June 1 in the Ozark A. A. U. outdoor track and field meet at St. Louis. Stella has her own reason of the race which Miss Stephens won

"Miss Stephens got the jump on me in that race. She not only used starting blocks, but she jumped the gun, gaining a two-yard lead before I was off. The same thing has happened often and I was always able to overcome my opponents. That time, however, I could not make up the distance. It was too short a race.

"When the meet was over, and the crowd had congratulated her for defeating me, she said, 'Who's Stella Walsh?' That wasn't very sportsmanlike. She knew who I was."

HELEN ABLE

Miss Walsh doesn't minimize Miss Stephens' ability. She continued

"I have deep respect for her as a runner, don't mistake me. She's a comer. She has the height and build—she weighs 10 or 15 pounds more than I do and is three inches tall'er. However, I am confident I can beat her when we meet again. I have run the distance in 6.4—two-tenths of a second faster than she ran it in beating me.

"If Miss Stephens is handled properly she'll go great in the next Olympics. I'd say she will take the place of Babe Didrikson as Uncle Sam's hope among the women athletes. But if I'm in the best of condition, I'm not worried about anybody, especially a 17-year-old girl."

M'LARNIN TO STAY IN BOXING RACKET

By Damon Runyon
(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service.)

New York, May 17—For several years the writer has been hearing it said:

"Jimmy McLarnin wants to get married and quit fighting. His next fight will be his last."

Now, as a matter of fact, McLarnin expects to keep on fighting just as long as he feels that he is able to give a good account of himself in the ring and he has some serious-minded notions about it. It is quite possible that he does want to get married, a most laudable ambition for a good looking boy to follow like McLarnin

I shall let it be said Jimmy already has the girl picked out. But it does not follow that matrimony will end his ring career.

He makes good money at the game. He has never been hurt or punched around to any extent. He knows no other business. He has been fighting since he was about 17 years old.

He has some years of pugilistic activity before him regardless of the outcome of his battle with Barney Ross at the Polo Grounds the night of May 28.

Therefore, one should be a bit thinking of retiring.

THIL CHAMP

If he whips Ross and retains his welterweight title, McLarnin expects to broaden his field of activity. He wants to take a crack at the middleweight title.

The world title is generally conceded to Marcel Thil of France. Teddy Yarosz of Pittsburgh seems to have some sort of claim on the American title by virtue of a victory over Vincent Dundee of Baltimore though Teddy was knocked out, after beating Dundee, in an overweight match with one Babe Risko.

The middleweight division can use a little pepping up, and McLarnin's invasion of it might be just the thing it needs

McLarnin cannot weigh over 150 pounds at ring carrying a satchel of lead but at that weight he ought to be able to make things mighty interesting for the brand of middleweight he sees around here

If he whips Ross the Vancouver boy will be all out of opponents, at least of the kind that would draw the money McLarnin has been accustomed to. Ross can drop back into the lightweight division, but McLarnin has no place to go among the welters

POP SMART

McLarnin's manager, crafty old Pop Foster, has never made it a practice to concede weight to an opponent

Much of McLarnin's success has been due to Pop's shrewd matchmaking. As a rule he always drew a pull in weights for James.

However, Pop now believes that Jimmy has reached a stage of ring experience and ability that makes him the equal of any man in the world within 10 pounds of his weight.

He may let Jimmy take on Thil in a world title match, to be staged in this country, if Jimmy is successful against Ross

But in any event you may be sure officer and fled the Willow Springs mind is retiring from the ring

Tickets to the Rockingham Races will be given each day to winners.

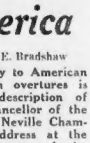
STABILIZATION

England REPLIES TO America

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

The reply to American stabilization overtures is the best description of British Chancellor of the Exchequer Neville Chamberlain's address at the annual banquet of the British Bankers' Association.



And it might be added that it is not very encouraging, despite the fact that eminent gentleman did say stabilization is an ultimate objective. He quite rightfully states exchange rates cannot be controlled without reference to other economic factors. Quite possible is a back-handed slap at the American silver policy, the Pittman bill and the proposed banking bill.

• • •

All, we gather Neville Chamberlain is disinclined to inflationary. The silver policy is not one of our favorites, but if it inconveniences England in managed currency plans we are all for it. The Pittman bill, we still believe, is only an inflationary as the alarmists wish to make it appear. The banking bill is opposed on all sides. The latter is the real inflationary danger. It is credit inflation that is to be feared in this country. Not money fairy inflation. We refer readers to the bulletin on business conditions issued last week by the Alexander Hamilton Institute. They will find a study on credit. They will also find a sound argument concluding the quantity of "hoard money" in this country has not yet been restored to normal proportions. This is in the face of statements government borrowings have bloated that same account.

• • •

Notebook: The banking bill, despite the above, is fought because of its long range implications . . . And this talk about what France or Germany did along the lines of fiat money seem strained when coming from those who would defeat the Pittman bill . . . For at no time in modern history or during the inflation periods did either of these countries resemble the America of today economically . . . The gold flow is not there . . . Now for British herself . . . With the stabilization fund shrouded in secrecy who can guess at the amount of inflation which has already descended on the British . . . .

• • •

It is all this talk of inflation that worries us about the security market. For the very long term passage of the banking bill would be frightening. But there is nothing else that we can see at present. Particularly with the volume of "bank money" short of the figure required by the projection of the normal growth line. If sudden realization of this fact descends on the street it will be [illegible] bad. That is why we want the rails to come along and say the move is the real thing.

• • •

Shorts: Once the carrier shares lift their way through noted resistance there will be reason to hope some fair part of the move took place on the actual business outlook . . . We will continue to confine ourselves to oil, aviation and dairy shares . . . And will buy the rails when, as and if the Dow-Jones 20 stock index touches 38 on the hourly release . . . The silver stock policy remains the same . . . The time smelting shares are favored and have had the dip late comers were advised to await before buying.

Freight Loadings Increase

By Associated Press

Washington, May 17—The Association of American Railroads today announced freight loading and revenue freight for the week ending May 11 were 575,185 cars, an increase of 1,936 over the previous week, a reduction of 27,613 as compared with the same week in 1934 and an increase of 40,579 over the corresponding week in 1933.

Miscellaneous freight totalled 224,398 cars, a decrease of 1,007 below the preceding week and 15,721 below 1934 but an increase of 23,875 above 1933.

Less than car lot merchandise amounted to 160,328 cars, a decrease of 1,918 below the preceding week, 4,758 below 1934 and 4,353 below 1933.

Coal loadings totalled 95,684 cars, an increase of 11,354 above the preceding week, a reduction of 7,873 below 1934 and an increase of 13,329 before 1933.

STOCK Prices Turn MIXED

SOME TRADERS TAKE PROFITS

New York, May 17—The roaring stock market lion of yesterday had more of a lamb-like appearance today.

The inflation picture did not seem near as bright as in the preceding session and many nimble traders took profits and adjourned to the sidelines to await another buying cue.

Result was that equities, after a fast and rather firm start, turned irregular, and the activity contracted.

U. S. Steel, Bethlehem and other steel shares turned in a strong performance, adding to their best levels in months. Other industrial shares, including American Can, also moved up nicely.

Copper stocks were in demand, with Anaconda mounting to a new high for the year.

Rails were sluggish on profit taking. The report showing a 6000 car increase in loadings failed to stimulate the group.

Utilities were firmer, but failed to make much headway despite intimations that the holding company bill would be further modified.

Standard Oil of N. J. was the bright spot in the oils reflecting good earnings. Others, farm equipments, mail orders and packing shares were erratic.

Commodities were mixed with wheat down more than a cent a bushel, while cotton held firm.

Current News

The strong stand taken by the White House to dispel rumors that the administration would not be too resentful if the Patman fiat money bonus bill were passed over the veto in favor of water over the revised inflationary enthusiasms.

With the measure being sent to the President today for his already announced signature of disapproval, the House Congress on Monday was expected.

A few financial observers believed the House might override the veto, but that similar action

Railroad shares, though, were [illegible] and failed to make any in the Senate was extremely improbable.

Another slight setback for the inflation-minded was the statement of England's chancellor of exchequer, Neville Chamberlain, that the British government was "watching" the currency situation to determine when the time was ripe to seriously talk stabilization.

Although the chancellor's expressions were a little vague, they indicated to some banking quarters that a tripartite agreement between the major powers may not be so far away as had been thought.

The bond-buying program of the Treasury, apparently dormant at the moment, was still being watched carefully by financial sector. The price of the bar silver was lowered today in London and futures were off in Montreal. But in New York imported silver was advanced one-half cent an ounce to 77 cents.

Monsanto Profit Up

Monsanto Chemical Co. reports for the March quarter net profit of $737,417, or 78 cents a share in first quarter of 1934.

Records Hopes of Optimists

By B. C. Forbes

What business would like to see—and optimists hope to see: Concentration by Congress on only absolutely necessary legislation.

Suspension of additional disturbing legislative "reforms."

Postponement of enactment of social security legislation until next session, in order to have the problem more thoroughly sifted.

Defeat of autocratic Article 2 of the bank bill.

Drastic modification of the anti-utility measure.

Retention, for a limited period, of a greatly modified and restricted NRA.

B. C. Forbes

Recasting of AAA to reduce its cost to consumers and its regimentation of producers.

Cessation of the multiplication of bureaucrats and bureaucracy.

Other steps to check rising government costs and deficits.

Adoption of a definite, sensible silver plan.

Opening of negotiations with leading nations, as soon as considered feasible, for exchange stabilization, with return to the (bullion) gold standard.

And adjournment of Congress before July.

Also:

Prompt settlement of current labor disputes and adoption of a workable plan for adjudication of future differences, a plan favoring universal adoption of neither the closed nor the open shop.

Further Supreme Court decisions clipping the wings of high-flying New Dealers having scant regard for the constitution.

Further helpful interpretations of the securities act and the security exchanges act by SEC, in order to make capital-raising more practicable.

Continued improvement in investment values, since this would not only help sentiment, but would expand purchasing power.

Quickening of the incipient revival in home-building and other building and further strengthening of rents and real estate values.

The optimists in the business world, furthermore, hope to see multiplying signs that the majority of Americans have become more anxious for betterment in economic conditions and in employment than for new un-American political innovations and experiments.

They are less worried over blatant demagogues whose mouthings rend the air than over "anti" proposals, policies and programs, sponsored by those now in power at Washington.

Finally, they would like to see such restoration of confidence and of activity that pedlars of political nostrums and panaceas would attract little attention or support.

Many men of affairs are preparing to do their bit to bring about such conditions—and also to fight openly and unrestrainedly fresh attacks upon them and upon business revival.

Are the optimists likely to be direly disappointed?

I, for one, am encouraged, by recent exhibitions of public sentiment, to hope that the worst is over politically, economically, financially, socially.

I believe the weight of evidence now is that the flood of demagoguery which invariably follows acute depressions is destined to ebb—major panics and social distress always produce self-constituted leaders of the Huey Long, Dr. Townsend, Coughlin stripe.

The soil of America is not conducive to their attaining gigantic stature—they suggest the biblical story of seed which fell on shallow ground, flourished for a brief spell, then withered.

Just imagine what would be the response today if some Washington bureaucrat—or even President Roosevelt—where to exhort every city and town and community in the land to whoop-up demonstrations and processions in endorsement and celebration of NRA.

Would the nation respond again as it did when the spectacular General Johnson beat the NRA tom-toms so noisily? You know, I know, it would not.

Which means that the people of this country have tired of bureaucratic fireworks and are bent upon returning to orderly American ways of living, working and doing business.

Sensible, thoughtful, normal Americans have had enough political three-ring circuses and whoopee staged at their expense, an expense which has already skyrocketed our national debt to unprecedented figures and which will by and by bring inescapably backbreaking taxes.

High Time to Investigate

Communist Activities Widespread Throughout the United States

PATRIOTIC Americans who believe in their country and its traditions will hail with enthusiasm the decision of the House of Representatives to investigate the inroads of Communist propaganda in schools and colleges, the Army and Navy, and other Federal, State and civic institutions.

The indifference of many citizens and lawmakers to the steady and widespread campaign directed from Moscow against our form of government has been due largely to ignorance of the facts.

It is still news to many that the tenets of Communism are taught openly in some American public schools, by teachers supported by the taxpayers.

Massachusetts, happily, guards against such a thing happening here. Our teachers are loyal.

IT IS still news to many that Government relief funds have in some cases been diverted to the propagation of the Red doctrines.

It is still news to many that constant, if unsuccessful, attempts have been made to undermine the loyalty of the Army and Navy.

It is still news to many that a large percentage of labor difficulties and race troubles are deliberately fomented by Communist agitators and organizers.

An inquiry into this situation is the plain duty of Congress, and the findings which result should be pondered by all thoughtful Americans.

When a considerable group within our borders can plot armed revolution, and the rule of this country by an oligarchy along Russian lines, it is high time that plain citizens realize the situation.

The "Red bogey," as some of our liberals like to call it, is rather more than a bogey when Reds can adopt the slogan "To hell with the United States," and get away with it.

Why Jellyfish Are Jellyfish

And Always Will Be

Cornell University scientists discover the fossils of jellyfish near Cortlandt, New York, which have been lying there undisturbed, it is estimated, for 250 million years.

That is what you might call reaching a ripe old age. But even more significant is the announcement of the learned Cornellians that these fossilized Jellyfish, before they turned to stone back in 249,999,064 B. C., were just the same as those that you will meet in the Summer time off Nantasket.

It took the horse a mere forty million years to develop from a little five-toed animal the size of a rabbit to his present status. And the Darwinians will tell you that man required only a million years to evolve from an ape swinging by his tail from a tree into Homo Sapiens.

But the jellyfish evidently had no ambition to make anything of himself, and he is right where he was a quarter of a billion years ago.

We'll refrain from pointing the moral, except to say that rugged individualism seems to have had no place in his scheme of things.

"Swimming Holes"

Time to Guard Them

The "old swimming holes" are coming back into favor again.

Even the Legislature on Beacon Hill waxed enthusiastic when a proposition to add to facilities at Malibu Beach, Dorchester, came up for hearing.

The beaches and the swimming holes offer healthful pleasure to thousands.

They also offer a grave menace if left unguarded.

Now that the season is advancing, there should be no delay in seeing that the bathing places are adequately manned by lifeguards.

The Largest Trout

Caught in Charles

Thomas Ryan 12, of Fern Street, Auburndale, fixed a "shiner" to his hook.

He cast the tempting bait into the Charles River off the Weston bridge in Newton one day this week.

Result: He landed a trout weighing four and a half pounds.

Sportsmen say it was the largest trout ever taken from the Charles.

Floyd Gibbons often assures us that adventure may lie right near our homes.

The same seems to hold true of good fishing. Which, in fact, is in itself thrilling adventure.

Big Apple Crop

Promised by Blossoms

It's apple blossom time in Massachusetts.

As the buds burst into flower between now and the end of the month the countryside will present a glorious sight.

Best of all, the apple blossoms of late spring are the harbinger of fall harvests.

For Massachusetts a good blossom year means an apple crop valued at close to $5,000,000.

May the fondest hopes of apple farmers be realized!

Port of Boston

Business Picks Up

The Port of Boston is currently enjoying a business rebound.

One day this week twenty-two vessels docked here.

All the available help along the waterfront was given work.

Sounds like old times.

We hope it keeps up.

Up to Taxpayers

Forcing of Reforms

Boston is in danger of becoming known as the city first in taxes and last in economy.

The Boston Municipal Research Bureau tabulation just published shows the city to have the highest per capita expenditure.

At the same time the adjusted tax rate shows Boston again in the lead.

Taxpayers must soon force reforms. Or it will be impossible to do business in the city, let alone attract new industries.

Two Sides of the Same Picture

In its current official organ, the National Wholesale Wine and Liquor Dealers, Inc., discussing the continuing bootleg problem, makes these pertinent remarks:

"With bootleggers still selling more than half of the alcoholic beverages consumed in the United States, a year and more after the repeal of the Prohibition law, it would seem evident that their suppression by enforcement methods is only a remote possibility at best.

"We, the legitimate alcoholic beverage industry, have been co-operating and will continue to co-operate, with Secretary Morgenthau in his efforts for 'rigid enforcement,' but the results obtained by that policy during the past year must be admitted to be very discouraging.

"The market for the bootlegger is created by the comparatively high prices for legitimate liquor which are caused by the high taxes imposed upon it.

"While this situation continues, it is doubtful if a force of revenue agents as large as the standing army envisioned by the wildest dreams of a European dictator, instead of the mere handful now in the field, could smash the illicit liquor traffic in this country.

"The only practical solution of this problem is a reduction in the levies on legitimate alcoholic beverages."

The Government can increase its revenues and at the same time discourage lawbreaking by reducing taxes and diverting the bootlegger's vast market into the legalized trade.

Meantime, the public must help by buying ONLY FROM RELIABLE DEALERS and avoiding danger to health.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Puzzled but Not Played Out!

Suddenly the Russian woman half rose, thrust her big body across the table—began to speak. A moment since she had been brooding, darkly indifferent to the restaurant chatter. Now, abruptly she blazed.

"You . . . you . . ."

Her thin, clenched hands swept aside the silvery litter. Her eyes, deep sunk in hungering sockets, flared like torches. And, like another torch, her gutteral voice leaped, challenging:

Elsie Robinson

"You in America began something here . . . Keep it. Keep it! You—in spite of all the desperate position you may now be in—may be again what you were.

"You were once the hope of the world, the place to which the oppressed came. You may be it again . . . keep it . . . keep it!"

HAD KNOWN WEALTH

She slumped back, shuddering, her face in her hands. She was trying to shut out many things with those hands—many years.

She had known wealth, power, glory in those years, for she was a princess.

She had come to America many times. As foreigners do, she had sneered at this country —at our "greed," our "lack of culture," our "childish stupidity" when we tried to deal with older, wilier nations.

And after each visit, she had returned to Europe with her purse filled with American money and her heart rejoicing because she lived with civilized people.

Now she has seen those "civilized" nations crumble—one after the other. Betrayed by their own arrogance into the hands of dictators.

Unable any longer to think for themselves or speak their own minds. Men and women "disappearing" because they talked too much.

No warning—no trial—just suddenly vanishing, never to be seen again. And everyone—all Europe and Asia—in a frenzy of fear. Cringing—truckling—

AMERICA STILL BRAVE

Only America still brave! Muddled? Yes. Marred by discord and distress—but still mistress of her own strong, simple soul.

So the great Russian princess—gaunt, now, and stripped of pride and power—sits brooding in any kindly corner America has to offer and cries:

"You in America began something . . . do not give it up . . . keep it . . . keep it!"

Those words ring real. They are real.

They were spoken by a living woman to Sherwood Anderson, and he has put them on the final page of his latest and greatest book which Charles Scribner's Sons have just published—"Puzzled America."

And if you can read that book without a floodtide of pride and faith and deep devotion welling up in you, you've come on evil days.

For here, like a loved face emerging from the mists of anger and confusion, stands America. And it's a grand job you've done, Sherwood Anderson, in helping us see her again.

WE'RE PUZZLED

An honest job, too. No sentimental sugar-coating. Here are the pictures we've been seeing for ourselves — proofs of our stupid greed and waste—our callous indifference—our brutal blundering.

Proofs which have sickened and soured us—almost beyond all loyalty. But no proof there of irredeemable weakness or crookedness . . . nor any sign of surrender.

WE'RE PUZZLED, BUT NOT PLAYED OUT!

Force, Fire and Faith—they are the makings of this thing we call America.

We started with 'em . . . AND BY GOD WE'RE GOING TO KEEP THEM! And here's a hand to you, Big Boy, for reminding us of that fact.

"Made in Japan"

The following letter offers official and responsible testimony as to the menace to American industry and labor in the importation of Japanese matches made by labor paid only 6 cents a day:

American Match Institute,
420 Lexington Ave.,
New York City.
April 22, 1935.

Colonel J. Willicombe,
Secretary to William Randolph Hearst,
Los Angeles Examiner.

My Dear Colonel Willicombe:

I have just come from the office of Mr. H. C. Traute, vice-president of the Diamond Match Company, the originator of the American book match which is so popular with all classes of American smokers.

In fact, with the American public in general, because it is a poor man's match. The book match, as you know, is given away free with cigars, cigarettes, etc., and also by hotels, restaurants, etc., throughout the nation to the consuming public.

For years this industry has prospered and Mr. Traute, who blazed the trail for the American book match industry in behalf of the Diamond Match Company, has seen many new American companies engage in the manufacture and sale of book matches.

He knew that this was their privilege, but now that we see Japanese book matches on the American market, we have great cause for concern because of the low price at which these Japanese matches are offered to the trade.

It is singular indeed to note that the paper board from which these book matches are manufactured is made by a secret American process and the Japanese evidently are importing this American match paper board into their own country and utilizing their 6c-per-day labor to manufacture book matches, which enables them to pay the present duty, which is 40 per cent ad valorem, and still undersell American book matches by almost 30 per cent.

No American manufacturer could begin to compete with the Japanese method of doing business.

The high production costs of the American manufacturer practically prohibit him from entering into any price war with Japan in order to hold his own and only market here in America.

I am sending you herewith a copy of a letter which we are addressing to the members of our industry today.

In closing, I want to extend to you and Mr. Hearst, on behalf of the entire American match industry and its 25,000 employes, our sincere appreciation and thanks for the splendid battle the Hearst publications are waging against cheap Japanese imports, which are doing so much today in retard recovery. Thanking you again for your co-operation, I am,

Very truly yours,
F. X. A. EBLE,
Manager.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, May 17—Thoughts while strolling: Nobody munches an apple on New York streets.

Myrna Loy suggests a diet of star dust. Breakfast motion: Dates with cream and a rasher of fried bacon. I never see a fire extinguisher without wanting to try out just one turn.

The Lady in the Iron Mask—Fannie Hurst. Who remembers the first hitching post of cement? You have to blast everything you buy out of cellophane these days.

O. O. McIntyre

Almost nobody knows how to use the words only and very correctly. The town's smartest whitehead—George W. Tryon.

One word description of Miriam Hopkins—flonty. Ted Saucier, of all people, is becoming a thin man.

They come and go. That is all but Al Jolson. Nancy White and her aunt Carmel Snow. Both talented fashion experts. Few artists have been so true to their ideals as Art Young, bless him!

For oblivion: The table ostrich who picks his teeth behind a large napkin and weens nobody seeth.

To eat in silence: Ask the man or woman next to you to tell all he or she knows about Martin Van Buren.

Look alikes: Warner Oland and the late Reginald Vanderbilt. The way Major Bowes camouflages the pathos in those amateur hours is art.

What literature needs is another Ring Lardner. Tap dance schools that fill at midnight. Was anyone ever satisfied with a marked down "bargain?"

In the perfumed purlieus of the upper Fifties. A Dickensy female character in her 70's who wears a wig, a long black chardaine dress and carries a cane. Her clientele is composed of the social matron and debutantes. She buys old clothes, trousseaus, bric-a-brac, everything.

Customers drive up with a suit case. She approaches without a word of greeting, takes the bag and hobbles back to another room. The contents are inspected and she screeches: "Two dollars, yes or no!" One way for the ones rich to pick up pin money during a depression.

A high in extemporaneous wit was achieved by Bert Hanlon, a vaudeville actor, at a dinner given for a New Yorker in Hollywood recently. He began by welcoming the visitor "to the land of semi-tropics and Semmy Goldwyns," and immediately turned hilariously ribald.

So much so, he not only had them rolling on the floor but before going home received an offer for—after a long lay-off — from the highly press agented Lubitsch himself.

They were talking of fancy words of modern literature. The palm, it would seem, goes to Carl Van Vechten in his "Tattooed Countess."

Among them were: deracinate, dolent, epithumetic, eponyms, demoglot, morigeration, oppugnancy, passerine, phylactery, pinguid, procacious, samel, sciapodus and scliotist. Indeed some are not to be found in Webster's Unabridged.

Baird Leonard is regarded by many as The Original Sophisticate. Her writings were first to have the Kit Morley edge that cuts floating silk. She blazed the trial for the superior cynical era that launched Dorothy Parker, Lois Long, Peter Arno, Robert Benchley and others.

The only difference is that Miss Leonard generalized, while many of those who followed were cruelly specific. In the old Morning Telegraph, her Manhattan Monotypes etched the passing parade in strokes of acid.

She pinned butterflies to the wall far more expertly than those who followed. And she did it without singling out personalities.

Safety in Air Travel

In the following telegram to William Randolph Hearst, David L. Behncke, president of the Air Line Pilots' Association, discusses the recent wreck of the TWA luxury airliner, in which United States Senator Bronson Cutting was killed. Mr. Behncke charges that defective federal regulations and over-worked pilots are making commercial aviation needlessly hazardous.

Chicago, Ill., May 11, 1935.

William Randolph Hearst,
San Simeon, Calif.:

As a result of the recent disastrous crash of the TWA luxury airliner which caused five deaths, including Senator Bronson Cutting, the pilots and the serious injuries of surviving air travelers the Air Line Pilots' Association has requested the Bureau of Air Commerce, headed by Eugene Vidal, to make a complete investigation of the catastrophe in the interest of public safety.

Air line pilots are vitally interested in the safe operation of schedules and the motto of ALPA since its inception has been schedule with safety. Surveys have been made and data presented to the bureau of air commerce showing that increased speeds and overworking of pilots constitutes a most serious hazard.

During the convention of the Aero Medical Association, which is composed of noted flight surgeons, including the army and navy, a resolution was passed to the effect that pilots' hours in the air should be limited.

It is also an important provision of the present air mail law that air line pilots should not fly over 85 hours per month and it is most important to note that this decision was reached only after a six months' study of arguments presented by both operators and pilots.

Regarding flight time limitations as specified by the bureau of air commrece, it is stated that a first pilot shall not fly in excess of 30 hours in any seven-day period or more than eight hours in any 24-hour period provided, however, that relief from flight duty for not less than 24 hours shall be arranged for each pilot within each seven-day period.

Hours in Air

When the TWA crash occurred both pilots had been in the air for much more than eight hours and had been subjected to a severe flight as a result of very inclement weather.

Regarding flight limitation waivers the Air Line Pilots' Association has gone on record with the bureau of air commerce in their recommendations that there should be no waivers on flight time limitation for one run.

Exceptions should be made only in the case of Pan-American Airways which provides for an entirely different setup.

Even in this case operations should not be on waivers: There should be specified regulations to cover this type of operation.

Recognizing the logic of the air line pilots' argument, the bureau of air commerce states that strict application of the eight hour flight time limitation may be waived, but only under exceptional circumstances in which safety is not jeopardized.

Fuel Ruling Hit

When the TWA crash occurred both pilots had already flown more than half way across the country as it is the custom of TWA to make its transcontinental run in two divisions. This schedule arrangement no doubt exhausts the pilots who are trusted with the safe delivery of property and human lives.

The air line pilots have also not only asked that the bureau of air commerce enforce safe flight limitations but attention should be given to the regulation providing for SUFFICIENT RESERVE FUEL TO INSURE SAFETY TO THE TRAVELLING PUBLIC.

Originally the air bureau regulations contained the following provision with regard to fuel supply "suitably located intermediate fueling stations shall be provided unless the plane carries 35 per cent additional fuel and oil in excess of that normally required for flight between the scheduled stops.

At no time, however, shall less than 35 per cent excess fuel for flight under normal conditions between schedule or intermediate refueling stops be carried."

When the Department of Commerce asked for suggestions on the original bulletin the air line pilots declared that under no circumstances should this regulation be altered or waived and it should be strictly enforced at all times.

Despite this very emphatic recommendation the bureau of air commerce changed from the 35 PER CENT MINIMUM requirement to 45 MINUTES MINIMUM requirement.

The Air Line Pilots' Association firmly believes that in the interest of public safety the 35 per cent minimum requirement should be strictly enforced; and if the department insists on providing for a gas reserve computed by hours and minutes THEN CERTAINLY THE GAS RESERVE SHOULD BE CONSIDERABLY MORE THAN 45 MINUTES WHICH WE CONSIDER GROSSLY INADEQUATE.

Pilot's Risk

According to witnesses, as Pilot Bolton lay dying beside his wreck he said that he had run out of gas and not to bother about him but to take care of his passengers and co-pilot first.

That is the way airline pilots die and have been dying at the rate of one every 29 days for approximately the past five and one half years.

These figures are based on Department of Commerce statistics and to prevent further destruction of these highly trained flyers to positively insure the safety of the air traveler, air commerce regulations governing scheduled operation of interstate and foreign passenger air line service should be carefully made and rigidly enforced.

Air travel is safe, but only when in charge of crews who are not fatigued and who are permitted to fly under regulations conducive to public safety.

DAVID L. BEHNCKE,
President Air Line Pilots' Association, Chicago, Ill.

Love and Loss

By Edgar A. Guest

'Tis strange our sweetest rapture springs
From joys which soonest go.
The delicate and fragile things
The rarest beauty show.
Behind the laughter in our eyes
The tears of sorrow sleep.
The only joys we really prize
Are those we cannot keep.

Who sets a guard on granite gray
Which weathers every gale
Or gives a thought from day to day
To things that never fail?
No man would quite so foolish be,
Whatever be his views,
As to protect with lock and key
The things he cannot lose.

Were roses sturdy as the weeds
What eye would think them fair?
We only love the flower that needs
The gardener's constant care.
If life were endless, fixed and sure,
What man could love supply?
Who'd call a doctor in to cure
The child that couldn't die?

Oh, love and loss go hand in hand
And love and death are twain,
We care because we understand
Our care may be in vain.
We love because we never know
How soon we'll sit and weep.
For all the joys worth while below
Are those we cannot keep.
